Famous blues licks tab

When renowned pop artist Andy Warhol wrote in 1968 in a program to exhibit his work that in the future, everyone would be world famous for 15 minutes, he could not predict that the chosen ones would be allowed to extend their 15 minutes of undeserved fame in the years of media coverage. The perpetual news cycle that characterizes the online media always needs new material that has helped feed America's unhealthy obsession with celebrities, even if these celebrities are mostly known for being featured on tabloid covers rather than doing anything to note. These seven celebrities are simply famous for being famous - if you can even call them a modest level of celebrity famous. 1. Kim Kardashian Kim Kardashian Kim Kardashian is leaving the shopping space site for DASH Timothy A. Clary / AFP / Getty Images More than any other form of media to save the tabloids themselves, reality TV is especially guilty of propelling unspectacular, often irritatingly privileged people to international fame. Kim Kardashian, Big Boot Star of E! The popular series Keeping Up with the Kardashians, has used its voluptuous appearance and general emptiness to remain at the forefront of tabloid news for at least half a decade. Her first big break came from leaking a sex tape, but lately she has remained relevant as the wife of rap-prone star Kanye West. Funny, she first attracted attention as a friend and stylist of another talentless celebrity ... 2. Paris Hilton Paris Hilton is the daughter of Privilege, the great-granddaughter of the Hilton hotel founder, who had media fame handed her a silver platter shortly after signing with model agency Donald Trump as a teenager. The buzzed-about socialite gained international fame for her starring role in both sex tapes and reality show Simple Life with fellow privileged celebantante Nicole Richie, a show that found humour in a pampered couple's inability to perform low-paid jobs. She wrote a bestseller, starred in several more funny reality shows (including Paris Hilton's Dubai BFF), and failed to launch an acting career before enduring a very public fall from grace that gave David Letterman one of his best moments as a late night host. She still rakes in cash as a celebrity DJ and the face of her own fashion line today. 3. Tila Tequila Thien Thi Nguyen - better known by her stage name Tila Tequila - manipulated social media to turn herself into a celebrity for no apparent reason, except that she was attractive. She became the most popular person on Myspace and went down the logical path for talentless celebrities, scoring a reality show on MTV called A Shot at Love with Tila Tequila, in which men and competed for her love. She enjoyed success as a model, but could not find success as a recording artist. Ever since she's been here. (More as 10 years) fame flickered, it was shown in several sex tapes, went through several legal battles, confessed to bipolar and having multiple personalities, endorsed a large number of conspiracy theories, made anti-Semitic/pro-Nazi claims online, and was declared unrehabilitated by Dr. Drew Celebrity Rehab. Kevin Federline Guys may be known for nothing too. Kevin Federline married after the wedding of pop singer Britney Spears, for whom he previously worked as a backup dancer, in 2004 after just three months of dating. Their toxic relationship and manipulation of Federline Spears was preserved in amber in the home reality tv video Britney and Kevin: Chaotic. Around the time of their divorce in 2007, Federline began his career as a rapper and cornea enthusiast, releasing a widely reviled Game with Fire. He's only barely managed to stay in the spotlight since (what else?) by appearing on reality shows, WWE promotions, and playing bit parts in film and television. 5. Bristol Palin Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin enjoyed a rapid ascent to political notoriety as an ill-informed choice for John McCain's running mate in the 2008 presidential election. Stranger still, her eldest daughter has become a celebrity in her own right, not in political circles, but instead in the tabloids for teenage pregnancy during her mother's failed bid for vice president. She has appeared on dozens of talk shows as a kind of ambassador for teenage pregnancy and prevention. Par for the course, Palin later wrote a memoir and starred in her own reality series, one season of Bristol Palin's docudrama: The Life of Tripp, which only seemed to confirm suspicions that Bristol Palin wasn't interested enough to earn her level of fame. 6. Jenny McCarthy's Jenny McCarthy career in adult entertainment began quite simply, but since becoming Playboy Playmate of the Year in 1993, McCarthy has somehow become a consistent presence on reality and script TV, and then an outspoken advocate for autism rights and against vaccination. None of her films or TELEVISION work was popular or even well loved - the film she wrote and starred in, Dirty Love, even won the Golden Raspberry Award for worst film - but that didn't stop her from becoming a talk show regular and a hero of the disgustingly illogical anti-vax movement.
