He later went to Torongni, where he threw a grenade and shot a passer-by in a market, killing six people. He also injured Chunmal recently, who had gone to check after hearing gunshots in the village. From that point on, he proceeded from the village to the village, leveraging his position as a police officer to enter the house and shoot their residents. At 10.m:30 p.m., Woo took it. He ordered the boy 운계 to receive soft drinks from a grocery store owned by Shin We-do , 52 years old, after receiving what he asked Wu to kill the boy and attacking the owner and his family. Shin We-do can escape after being shot in the leg even though his wife Son Won-jeom (손점) and his daughters Chang-sun (Cumshot) and Su-jeong (cumshot) were killed 평춘. He shot the family of four in bed and went to the house where the alarm was on. When the homeowner saw an armed policeman and asked what was going on, Woo explained that there was an alert as North Korean officials were found. The man invited Woo into the house for dinner, during which the latter complained about his small salary and his transfer from Busan to the countryside, eventually woo began shooting guests after one of them said his ammunition didn't actually look [needed clarification]. He killed twelve people in the house and eight others in the street, resulting in a total of 24 people killed in Pyeongcheonni, the police response, the suspect's death, even though police were alerted within minutes of the first shooting, it took an hour to assemble a team of 37 officers to search for the gunman, and the National Police Office in Seoul was not notified until 1:40 a.m.m From a police station in Kungryu, Wu found refuge in a farmhouse owned by 68-year-old Su-in-so , where he said he was chasing communist infiltrators and that his family should gather in the main room of the house so he could protect them. When the family gathered at his request, he held them hostage. Two hours later, police arrested him, and when forces closed in, Woo detonated two suicide bombs and three of his hostages. Sue himself survived the fatal crash. Four bullets and one grenade were recovered by police inside the farmhouse. Immediately after birth, when the rampage ended, 55 people and Wu himself died, while another 36 people were seriously injured. One of the injured children who was shot dead on May 8 resulted in 56 gunmen being killed, while 35 were still being treated in hospitals in Jinju and Mzan. Later, Chun Mal-soon said her boyfriend had suffered from inferior complexity and was attracted by the folk's comments about living together unmarried. The provincial police commander was later suspended and four other officers were arrested for negligence. South Korea's foreign minister, Su Chung-hwa, and the national police chief, Aung Mo, offered to resign as a form of reparations for Wu's rampage. Su Chung-hwa, who was responsible for the incident by President Chun Doo-hwan, laid his place on April 29 and Roh Tae-woo was appointed interior minister. A special parliamentary team has formed a 19-person parliament led by home affairs committee chairman Kim Chong Ha to investigate shootings and disaster management by police. In addition, the South Korean cabinet decided to pay compensation to the victims and their families.
