Review Hillsboro Marketing to) commercial magazines. b) the government. (c) international sources. d) surveys. e) computerized literature recovery databases. Answer: (d) Secondary data are the that have already been collected and readily available from other sources. This data is cheaper and can be obtained faster than primary data and can also be available when primary data cannot be obtained at all. Advantages of secondary data It is economical. Save effort and expense. It's time to It helps make primary data collection more specific, because with the help of secondary data, we can find out what the gaps and deficiencies are and what additional information should be collected. Helps improve understanding of the problem. It provides a basis for comparing the data that is collected by the researcher. Disadvantages of secondary data Secondary data is something that rarely fits within the framework of marketing research factors. The reasons for your non-adaptation are:- Secondary data collection unit-Suppose you want information about available income, but the data is available on gross income. The information may not be the same as we need. Class boundaries can be different when the units are equal. Before 5 years after 5 years 2500-5000 5000-6000 5001-7500 6001-7000 7500-10000 7001-10000 Therefore, the data collected above are not useful to you. The accuracy of child data is not known. The data may be out of date. Evaluation of secondary data Due to the disadvantages mentioned above of the secondary data, we will lead to the evaluation of the secondary data. Evaluation means that the following four requirements must be met:- Availability- You have to see that the type of data you want is available or not. If it is not available, then you have to go for the primary data. Relevance- You must be meeting the requirements of the problem. To do this we have two criteria:- The units of measure must be the same. The concepts used must be the same and the currency of the data should not be outdated. Accuracy- In order to find the accuracy of the data, the following points must be taken into account: - Specification and methodology used; The margin of error should be examined; You should see the reliability of the source. Sufficiency- Appropriate data must be available. Robert W Joselyn has ranked the previous discussion in eight steps. These eight steps are subclassed into three categories. You have given a detailed procedure for evaluating child data. Applicability of the research objective. Acquisition cost. Accuracy of the data. ◀ following article from the previous article : Authorship/Reference - About author(s) The article is written by Prachi Juneja and reviewed by the content team of the Management Study Guide.
