avi and .mp4 files. The latest versions of the plug-ins are compatible with Lightworks, Adobe, Avid, Cinelerra, and others. Akvis is the most important feature of the software package. It allows users to develop an unlimited number of filters and offers support for 32- and 64-bit versions. The latest versions of the application include the ability to record and apply the effect directly in the sequence. Akvis has a built-in recording system, but it is also possible to record filters by saving an image file. The new version of the software package offers a completely new set of effects that are called AviFilter and VideoFilter. Examples of the application of AviFilter effects: Limitations of the software: Some effects are only available for the 32-bit version of the software. Effects of the "Animation" and "Composite" categories do not work properly with the 64-bit version of the application. Effects from the "Animation" and "Composite" categories are missing in the DirectX plug-ins. Installing ----- To install the software package, you can install via the **My Products** section of the **Akvis Support** website. If you are interested in a multilingual version of the application, you can download **plugins-global-global.pak** in the "Multilingual" category. The package includes translatable versions of the program. Documentation ----- You can see the user guide by pressing the **Help** button in the application window. This will open a help page. Available support ===== You can support the development of the application by buying the software package. Conclusion ===== Akvis is a well-known application used by professionals to create and edit video files. The application's main advantage is the creation of filters for videos and images. AviFilter and VideoFilter let users create and apply effects to any frame of the video or image. The application provides a large set of features for users to create and edit videos and images. The application's creators are working on the development of new effects and improving the existing ones. The new version of the application lets users create filters and apply them directly 520fdb1ae7
