Songs from shrek two

Wikimedia's article Shrek is a collection of soundtracks from all four Shrek films, including individual editions for the film score. Each soundtrack contains all the songs that appear in their respective film, and the soundtrack to the score contains music written by Harry Gregson-Williams and John Powell. Shrek (2001) Von Shrek was unique in that he used pop music and other oldies to move the story forward. Covers of songs such as On the Road Again and Try a Little Tenderness were integrated into the film's score. When the film was to be completed, Katzenberg suggested that the filmmakers move the film to come out with a big laugh; Instead of finishing the film with a collection of short stories closing over Shrek and Fiona as they go into the sunset, they decided to add the song I'm a Believer to Smash Roth and show off all the fabulous creatures in the film. Although a version of Rufus Wainwright's Hallelujah appeared on the soundtrack, it was John Cale's version that appeared in the film. Wainwright was a DreamWorks artist and John Cale wasn't, so licensing issues banned Cale's version from appearing on the album's soundtrack. Ben Folds' song Rockin' the Suburbs was used in the film's trailer, but was not included in either the soundtrack or the film, but it was eventually featured in Over the Hedge. The first trailer shows All Star from Smash Roth. When the messengers come to Shrek's swamp, the trumpeter plays the melody of Hawaii's 5-O Discovery Theme by Morton Stevens. After Shrek's friends start a party at Shrek's house, Chick's song Le Freak is heard. In the middle of the credits scene, Eddie Murphy is heard singing All by Myself Track 10, You're So True Different From the version heard at the end of the film credits. The end of the credit version, also called the remix, is available exclusively for the physical and iTunes versions released in the UK. Track 11, People Ain't No Good is slightly censored, removing crap from the lyrical, so it would be appropriate for inclusion on the soundtrack.
