Remington 870 classic trap review

U/5Posted by Jason Brumett The Remington 870 Wingmaster Classic Trap shotgun was released in the year 2000 as a special limited anniversary. It's another one of those target guns like the Remington 1100 Classic Trap which, in my opinion, is a mantelpiece gun. While you can take it out and shoot it every once in a while its getting nice to be an every day gun. Why? Well for starts is fine gold engraving and a gold plated trigger... yes, a golden plated trigger. With an MSRP of about $1000 it's a little expensive, but for all you gun aficionados or those of you who know a passionate gun aficionado it can be a great gift. This gun could certainly be a piece handed down over generations if properly cared for. In addition to the golden inlay it also has a very nice high-gloss coat, and a polished blue receiver. I have no opportunity to try I don't buy, but based on reading the species it seems to have all the things I want. · 870s are about as tough as an anvil. if the price goes right this! · 870 Trap..... Oh yes My friends Dad had one and it was the best shooting shotgun I ever had in my paws. The first time I shot it [and I was new to attract shooting] 20 clay birds had bitten the dust in the air. Wish I had an 870 just like that. Oh did I say it was one of the best shotguns I've ever seen? It was. Longboard · I have one. As far as I can tell, the only difference is the stock and the middle bead. It doesn't shoot any better than my old field grade 870. In fact, the stock suits me worse than the field grade. Don't get me wrong, it shoots well. But so does my other usual jane 870. · Booking Starter · #5 · Oct 31, 2008 Is the Pump Action on the Wingmaster Classic Trap Better Than on a Normal 870? The 870s I dealt with all had kind of wobbly and tough actions. · I have one, my favorite bird and bunny gun. · Booking Starter · #7 · Nov 9, 2008 Can it take all the aftermarket parts of a regular 870? · Like stocks , and front gripes, and magazine extensions and so? Yes. Internally, I'm not 100% sure, but I think so. · Booking Starter · #9 · Nov 10, 2008 Such as stocks, and pre-gripes, and magazine extensions and such? Yes. Internally, I'm not 100% sure, but I think so. Well, you've got the one I already had in mind (magazine expansion), so cool... Now, to save the cash. I should have taken a year off between college and grad school to work, so I would have money lol. · I bought a really nice older Wingmaster early this year. I took down that huge walnut stock and forearm, replaced it with a compound forearm and youth stock. Took that pretty 28 Modified barrel off, replaced it with a 21-gun tackle. Added a mag extension, sidesaddle and flashlight. Now it's a great SD shotgun. And 30 minutes in the garage with the old parts and I can take it bird hunting. · Like stocks , and front gripes, and magazine extensions and so? Yes. Internally, I'm not 100% sure, but I think so. Yes, they vary. They 870 and the Model 12 dominated the trap fields years ago. There is nothing wrong with them today and should serve your stuff. I still see a lot of 870s on the field. · Booking Starter · #12 · Nov 11, 2008 Is there anyone making fancy shares for Remington 870s? I ask because I think about the 100th anniversary model, largely just because it can take 3 shells and I always like to have more options, but standard stocks never fit my body no matter what's done to match them and monte carlo stocks almost always fit me without getting refit. · Boyds, and the major stockmaker from Missouri, Weineg (surely misspelled), Weineg will easily maximize your platinum credit card with some of its options. Please, sign up or register Federal firearms laws preventing the sale of a weapon from Red Dot Arms, LLC, directly to an individual in another state (we are located in Illinois). We need to send your firearm directly to an FFL dealer near you. The steps to follow are: Order your firearm online using our secure shopping cart. If you know the FFL dealer, you're going to use at the time of order placement (not a requirement) enter his name and address in the 'Ship to' field. Find an FFL dealer near you who will accept the transfer of the firearm for you. Most sporting goods stores and pedan stores will provide this service for a small fee. Also, gun clubs, shooting ranges, etc can provide this service to you. If you don't know which FFL dealer to use in your area, make a comment in your order and we'll help you locate one near you. We have access to a large list of traders in the U.S. who will gladly handle a transfer for you. Most merchants charge about $25 for a transfer. You must confirm the transfer with your local FFL dealer in advance. Next, the dealer sends us a copy of his signed license if we don't already have it on file. To check if a license is on file, contact us. Note: It is now legal for us to accept a billed or email copy of your dealership license! Make sure the dealer knows the gunman comes from Red Dot Arms. If you've used a dealer we already have on file, call him to let him know that a gun is on the way for you. We will send you an email when the firearms ships, which will include a tracking number. Return order policy If an item is available for Backorder, you can still add it to your cart and place the order. Typically, items on Backorder require between 6-10 weeks before full-fill. If you have multiple products in your cart during checkout, items that are in STOCK will ship first and your Backordered products will be shipped separately. Red Dot Arms will notify you by email when your Backordered item is full-fold. At any time, you can also join your account for shipping status. Why Backorder? Due to the nature of the current market landscape, certain items are in high demand. By placing a backorder, it ensures it you'll be at the top of the list when HOT items become available in the Red Dot Store. Will my credit card be charged for a backorder? No. Your credit card and the purchase amount will only be charged at the time of the order's full-fill. My dad shoots trap with the 1100 version & I seriously look at the 870 model. I regularly shoot my 1100 competition synthetic though want to have something different when I feel like switching. Did anyone own or shoot the classic trap model only.. How is functionality & performance? Thank you all, Ithaca · It will kick harder than the 1100, but there's a reason they sold 10 million 870s. · Google Remington 870 trap model opinions and read away. joe · Booking Starter · #4 · Mar 26, 2016 A few years ago my dad had a normal 870 wingmaster at cabelas & he ended up looking at their six in stock & disappointed going home. Apparently there were splits on the inside of the handicap? My fear is that the 870 CT will have the same splits... Anyone know anything about this? Thank you, Ithaca · There's certainly nothing wrong with the 870 Classic Staircase. They're good solid guns. That said if I was looking for a Trap model 870,I would try and find a good used TC or even a TB. They are Work horses and smash targets, plus their price will be a good bit less. · A few years ago my dad had a normal 870 wingmaster at cabelas & he ended up looking at their six in stock & disappointed going home. Apparently there were splits on the inside of the handicap? My fear is that the 870 CT will have the same splits... Anyone know anything about this? Thank you, Ithaca If the splitting length wise, down the middle of the front, under the barrel, that's the way they're made, there's nothing wrong with them. All my it went from the 1976 manufacturing 870TB I bought new in 1976, to the last Wingmaster I bought. The 870TB was so when I got it out of the box, in 39 years and 100,000+ rounds, that didn't change. If I hadn't already had 4 Remington trap guns and didn't support a motorcycle habit as well, I would have bought an 870 Classic Staircase by now. · It really likes 870s and 1100s. Own some. But mine are pre 90' monsters. I've bought 4, two 870s and two 1100s in the past while. Not one stayed in my possession for more than a few months. What I learned to expect was not present. I would have a good used TB or of the 70s or 80s buys if I wanted one to shoot. · See if you can find a good used 870 competition These are single shot pumps and have a gas valve to help with recoil. They work well and have excellent step rib barrels. They typically sell for $700-$900. · I have a 70's vintage 870 TC and one of the 90s exalted the ear bored barrel and choking tubes. Both smash targets · What Pheasantmaster said.... Get an older one. · Mechanically, and leaving the woodwork, is an old school 870 built differently from the modern version ? You'll get a lot they don't make 'em like they used to from older guys about Remingtons, but at age 63 (older man)', here's my experience; I bought new Remington 870s and 1100s in every decade that starts with and including the 1970s, to the present. My 2012 manufacture 1100 Competition Synthetic is one of the most beautifully machined, finished and functioning 1100's I've seen in over 40 years of clay target shooting. As for the good old days, which I think the 70s are now, my Sept. 1976 produced 870TB, which I bought new in Dec 1976 had a slight rib misalignment at the breech end. The gun had a number of other minor issues, which were corrected; including an incomplete finished extractor and some wood finishing blemishes, so things weren't all perfect in the DuPont days at Ilion, either. I was too young and stupid then to go to a new barrel, the gun shot 60/40 PVB, dead on and ground targets; 100,000+ rounds, it still does. My 1100 CS was still the better gun, right out of the box for fit, finishing and feature, like my 1100 Classic Trap. I was actually the least impressed with some of the late 1980s 870s and 1100s than previous, or current production. · Mechanically, and leaving the woodwork, is an old school 870 built differently from the modern version ? Mainly the stainless steel lifter in the receiver (older models) and the light contour barrels on the newer ones (never was a fan of the newer barrels). barrels).
