I find it hard to imagine someone who wouldn't be involved, bumped and moved. I would recommend it unconditionally to anyone, whether they have read a hundred stories about the Holocaust or not. -Graeme Simsion, author of the international bestseller The Rosie Project In April 1942, Lale Sokolov, a Slovak Jew, was forcibly transported to concentration camps in Auschwitz-Birkenau. When his captors discover that he speaks several languages, he is put to work as a T'towierer (German word for tattooist), tasked with constantly marking his fellow inmates. Imprisoned for more than two and a half years, Lale has witnessed horrific atrocities and barbarism, as well as incredible acts of bravery and compassion. Risking his own life, he uses his privileged position to exchange the jewels and money of murdered Jews for food to save the lives of his fellow inmates. One day, in July 1942, Lale, prisoner 32407, comforts a trembling young woman, waiting in line to tattoo the number 34902 on her arm. Her name is Geeta, and in the first meeting Lale vows to somehow survive in the camp and marry her. Bright, harrowing, and ultimately hopeful of re-creating the experience of Lale Sokolov as the man who tattooed the hands of thousands of prisoners with what will become one of the most powerful symbols of the Holocaust, the Auschwitz tattooist is also a testament to the endurance of love and humanity in the darkest of circumstances. Auschwitz tattooist Heather Morris (Free Download) Auschwitz Tattooist: The heartbreaking and unforgettable international bestseller Heather Morris (Free Download), For readers of Schindler's list, the man who broke into Auschwitz and the boy in striped pajamas comes the heartbreaking story of the very best of humanity in the worst of circumstances. In 1942, Lale Sokolov arrived at Auschwitz-Birkenau. He got a job tattooing prisoners marked for survival - scratching numbers into the hands of his fellow victims in indelible ink to create what would become one of the most powerful symbols of the Holocaust. Waiting in line to be tattooed, terrified and shaking, was a young girl. For Lale - dandy, jack-guy, a bit of a coincidence - it was love at first sight. And he was determined not only to survive himself, but to provide for this woman, Geeta, too. Thus begins one of the most affirming life, courageous, unforgettable and human stories of the Holocaust: the love story of the tattooist Auschwitz. Review quote sincere ... The Sunday Times is an unusual and important book. We need as many memories of the Holocaust as possible, and this is a moving and ultimately inspiring story of love, loyalty and friendship amidst the horrors of war. I'm so glad Lale and Geeta were eventually able to live a long and happy life together, and grateful that Heather Morris was touched to record their incredible story. It's a triumph, Jill Mansell.
