Download or read on the Internet another beautiful novel Urdu Pir-e-Kamil (or Peer-e-Kamil) (Urdu: پیر کامل صلی اللہ علیہ وآلہ وسلم) means The Perfect Mentor, this novel written by Pakistani writer Umer Ahmed. It was first published in Urdu in 2004 and then in English in 2011. The book examines the turning points in the lives of two people: an escaped girl named Imam Hashim; and a boy named Salar Sikander with an intelligence ratio of more than 150. This story covers a period of about ten years. This is Ahmad's most popular work. It is followed by the sequel Aab-e-Hayat. The book is best known for its best-selling novels such as Peer-e-Kamil, Amarbaal, Sindagh Gulzar Hai, etc. Omgl Peer-e-Kamil is my favorite and first book by Umaira Ahmed, which I read following her other books. Salar was the disgusting guy I hated the most. He is gradually turning into a good guy, and the story of his transformation and realization of himself is something that Pleas guys, when it comes to model inspiration as a humble person, we are always an example of the best. This is a book that changed my outlook on life. A book that made me understand where I stand in other people's lives. It's never about how beautiful you are, how rich you are or how genius you are. The moment you disappear into the shadows, people forget about you. The only thing that matters is how good you are as a person as a person. How compassionate you are to these others. How you can inspire and positively change other people's lives. How can you show them the right way. How can you be the light guiding them when they are blinded by negativity and arrogance. I would recommend that every Urdu reader read this book. 2. Sana Peer-e-Kamil was my second Urdu novel and first Umayira Ahmed. One of the most popular Urdu novels ever written, Peer-e-Kamil is a journey from bad extreme to good extreme. And it's justified. Yes, it becomes somewhat incredible to reflect on the changes in Salar, the main character, but we know all the reasons. That's the beauty of it. Set against the backdrop of Islamabad, America, Paris and Lahore; Peer-e-Kamil tells the story of a boy blinded by his own fears about life. It is his journey into a man who is the complete opposite of the boy he was. At first, Umayira's subtly persuasive personality irritates and amuses Salar. But over time, he can't understand his obsession with it. All he did was spend a few hours with Umayira, but the few hours and words that were exchanged between them haunt him. They come to his mind when he least expects them, causing him to doubt his way of life. Ultimately, his thoughts make Salar primarily depressed, and he finds nothing worth living. He tries to pray, but fails miserably. As an extraordinary student, he has always been so far into heady in a sense of superiority that he is never able to decipher the meaning of Siratum Mustaqeem or the right way, does not know what the right way constitutes and why it is for people misled. And of all the people he's ever met in his life, he hates someone who claims to be religious. These people are the worst because for him they just exaggerate everything about themselves up to the handle. Time passes, and Salar finds himself changing. His transformation is completed in the late hours of the night when he is tied to a tree wearing only his Bermuda shorts. There he really understands the following levels of ecstasy, something that has always eluded him. This scene reminded me of a somewhat similar scene from Brida Paulo Coelho. Peer-e-Kamil is on the path of righteousness. It is about non-deterrence in the face of all the difficulties in life. He teaches a profound lesson about how to live and how our lives will reach a meaningful stage. It is about finding ourselves through our Creator. Peer-e-Kamil is about finding life itself. This is one of the most famous novels by Umera Ahmed, which contains an interesting social romantic and moral history of reformation in urdu. Peer-e-Kamil's story focuses on the sect's deviations, which violate the finality of our Prophet (P.B.U.H) meanwhile, narrating the heartbreaking journey of two unfortunate souls; Salar Sikander, a genius with an outstanding I.S., who has difficult questions about life and Imam Hashim, an ordinary girl with a stable family. Both poles apart in terms of spiritual awakening. Fate manoeuvres his life to cross each other's paths until Salar falls in love with the Imam after being confronted with a terrifying experience that completely changes the course of his life. It was first published in Shuaa Digest from July 2003 to February 2004 in Urdu, and then in English a translation of this novel was published in 2011 with the title Perfect Mentor PBUH. The Perfect Mentor, was written for you, for those moments of your life when you need to choose between light and darkness. You can follow the path that leads to light, or, if desired, follow a path that ends in darkness. Even in the light, you need to watch the step, so as not to stumble; once in the dark, it does not matter whether one can or can not see where one goes, because the darkness darkens with every step until darkness becomes its destiny. But sometimes in the dark, before the first miss, a person regrets the taken path and may want to return to this fork in the road of life, where the journey began. Then the only consolation is that the voice that directs and no one has any choice but to listen and follow. Pir-e-Kamil is the voice that can guide a person and guide him from darkness to light if he so wants to go down this path and really guides them who want it.
