

Tassi

Role: Scientist, scholar

Species: Asura

Gender: Female

Age: Adult

Social Status: Medium

The asura are a diminutive, highly intelligent race that considers themselves superior to other races in Tyria. They love building things, thinking up improvements to the things they built, and dream of one day conquering the world through their genius and their inventions. They love using big words to emphasize their intellects and will toss in an insult to make sure the "dumber races" know who the smartest person in the room is.

Tassi is an accomplished scholar with the Durmand Priory, an organization dedicated to unearthing the past. She's grown to be a recognized expert in the history of the Thorns, a mad royal family who tormented the world as tyrants centuries ago and returns to haunt the world every Halloween. She's currently tracking a lost relic of Mad King Thorn.

Character Traits (personality): curious, studious, inventive

Voice Quality (physical): nerdy, excitable, friendly

Accent: None

Lines:

(pleased)

An arcane book, a piping-hot vessel of tea, and a whole afternoon free. Ah, what more could a woman ask for?

(alarmed)

Oh, no. This passage just awakened some ancient army of the dead. Where did I leave that illuminated tome of binding countermagic?

(commanding)

You, flip over the table and barricade the door with it. No, remove the runes first. And do it safely! They date back to the eighth century!

(upset)

They're proceeding through the door! Please, repel them. I don't want to be devoured by the undead.

(happy)

Fantastic. You drove them back long enough for me to enact the counterspell. That arcane book is now inert, and I still have tea.

(stern)

I want you to stay away from the stacks. This research is delayed enough as is, and I don't need missing books slowing me down more.