child's home or in your own home and does not require special equipment. If you have a day job, you can limit your hours in the evening, or a few evenings a week, and still bring in money without spending anything. Big Cheese/Big Cheese Photo/Getty Images Busy professionals often prove too busy to walk their dogs during the day, so they hire others to deal with it. To avoid up-to-pre-pay chain costs, include the owner-provided leash as required in your ad. You can list your services for free on online classification sites, as well as encourage oral communication by insccally spreading to friends and family about your dog walking service. The above experts at Dog* Tec show that social media marketing doesn't always create new customers, but often serves as a boost to brand loyalty. Be warned that, in most places, dog walker must clean any dog feces they leave on the ground. Leftover plastic bags provide a free solution to that problem. Jeff Randall / Photodisc / Getty Images If you know how to design a website, or can gather patience to learn the necessary HTML, Javascript and CSS, you can launch a website design business without money. Some websites offer free website hosting and domains/sub-domains, and you can build your own website to support new businesses. A simple email to friends and business partners let them know you now offer website design services that start ball marketing rolling for free. omgimages/iStock/Getty Images If you bring good grammar and composition skills to the table, as well as some basic research skills, free writing offers a free trading option. Some websites offer writers the opportunity to write articles for a flat fee per article, after the writer completes a free online application process. In most cases, the process involves sending basic personal information or resumes and writing forms. Liberal blogging expert Sophie Lizard offers information on many blogs and websites that accept free submissions and queries, by email or form submitted on the site, and pay for articles or blog posts they accept. nensuria/iStock/Getty Images Even if you lack money, you may not be short of Furniture can serve you can live without, such as old CDs, DVDs, electronics and books. Business entrepreneur Cheryl Kimball recommends online auction sites as a place to offload those fixtures for a profit. Some auction sites, such as Bonanza, don't charge listing fees and make money by taking a percentage after you make a sale. Welcome! Subscribe to our newsletter Recent stories in Money Management I watched Mamma Mia last night (it seems that there was a sporting event of some kind occupying waves ...) and I sang along at the top of my lungs with Meryl Streep and ABBA: I work all night, I work all day , to pay the bills I pay Ain't it sad? And still never seems to be a single penny left for me That's too bad. Oh yes, Meryl and I were in good voice, let me tell you. It feels especially on target after shelling out for a new tyre this weekend, and a long overdue oil change. The tire situation was getting important – I had to air things up every three days and I was just waiting for it to blow while I had the kids in the car on an icy road or in negative weather levels. The tire on the other side blew out last month (leaving me stuck on the side of the road for 3 hours on the way to work) and when it was replaced, the technician suggested I replace one others since it was in bad shape, as well. I finally had a payday, and less than two days later, I came back to break again, after car care and paid the more pressing bills that were due. And so is the life of a single mother. always just scratch by and pray that a calamity doesn't hit before payday. I'm good and tired of it, too. Right now, here's how it is for and until the divorce is set in stone, there is no possibility of change. Even then, it's unlikely to change much more. I think I need some extra help. I'm considering going to a nonprofit debt adviser – there's a great one in my area (no charge) and they've been recommended to me. Maybe they can help me identify some additional ways to cut my budget even more. Has any of you used a debt advisor? Is that a good idea? Or not worth the effort?
