Television personality JoJo Fletcher | Source: David Becker/Getty Images There are many reality shows that are hated, but The Bachelorette may be one of the most loved. Each season one woman who hasn't found love on The Bachelor gets her own shot at finding love on national television. Last season it was JoJo Fletcher's turn. She was heartbroken by Ben Higgins, who told her he only loved her eventually proposing to someone else. So what else do you need to know about the Texas girl? Here are seven interesting facts. 1. She knew about Jordan Rodgers before jojo's show on The Bachelorette | Source: ABC In addition to JoJo, the big star this season was Jordan Rodgers, who used to be a quarterback for the Jacksonville Jaguars. Jordan is also Aaron Rodgers's brother, who just happens to be a huge NFL star. Although contestants are usually kept under wraps before the show starts, somehow JoJo found out about him. The week before this whole thing started I think his name got leaked and it was kind of all over the internet, so, you know, it's like 'Jordan Rodgers, brother Aaron' - so that's what I knew going into it, the reality star told ET. The secret was out there, but according to JoJo she didn't know much about him. Before I met him, she continued. I only knew tidbit about him, but nothing else, and I don't think it made a difference either way. I don't watch football closely, so it's not that much of a difference, but I certainly knew it was going to work. 2. She's half Persian Bachelorette | Source: ABC Reality show has gotten some flack over the years not diverse, but many people probably won't know about the current star's background just from looking at her. Farewell is from Texas, so she's definitely a rural girl, but it's not the only culture that plays a role in her life. My mom is Persian, and my father was born and raised in Tennessee, she wrote in her biography. I'm proud of my mother's background despite what social views are. It is important for me to stand up to people who stereotype Iranians. 3. She allegedly dumped her ex for the JoJo show after throwing the first pitch at Dodger Stadium | Source: Kevork Djansezian/Getty Images Is JoJo fame hungry? Or is her ex just out of revenge? Her ex, Chad Rookstool has done an interview with In Touch Weekly claiming that a single lady may not be what it seems. Both were dating as she competed for the hearts of Ben Higgins and Chad claims the two got back together between shows. JoJo said to me, 'Chad, come on, you know it was television,' he said. I think he just got suctioned into the show rather than actually trying to have legit feelings. Chad continued: 'She tried to tell me she wouldn't say goodbye forever - but I told her I wouldn't sit back and wait for her [this time], and that was it. Chad's interview came on the show and JoJo vehemently denies what's going on with her ex. She also insists that she is on the show for the right reasons. 4. She Keeps In Touch with Lauren B's The Bachelor | Source: ABC JoJo may not have won Ben Higgins' heart on The Bachelor, but the experience wasn't a complete loss. Not only did she get her own season, but she also got a new boyfriend - with the girl that Higgins ended up choosing. Who knows, maybe we'll see her at the wedding! Ben and I don't communicate, JoJo said on Good Morning America. I have a relationship with Lauren, which is my first priority. 5. Her brother was on the reality show too Ben Patton, Ernesto Arguello, and Tim Lopez (left to right) | Source: Frederick M. Brown/Getty Images This family knows how to get on TV! JoJo's half-brother, Ben Patton was on Ready for Love as one of three youngsters trying to find love. He also made an appearance on The Bachelor when Ben Higgins came to JoJo's hometown to meet her family. In the episode he asked Ben quite a bit to figure out The Bachelor's intentions with his beloved sister. 6. She owns real estate development company House for sale sign | Source: iStock JoJo definitely doesn't hurt for a paycheck as she got on reality TV. After graduating from Baylor University in 2011, she did pretty well for herself. She owns a development company called JHF Realty Development and reportedly has a net worth of $400,000, which is pretty good given she's still in her mid-20s. Some of them whether JoJo is still actively working with her company while she is on the show. There is no mention of it on her social media accounts and a website for her development company has not been found, but anyways, she will probably be fine after the show. 7. She is well connected in the Bachelor universe Of The Bachelorette | Source: ABC Reality Show series is much smaller than you'd think. The brunette knew several people who were on the show before she became a household name. According to the Inquisitr website, her brothers went to school with Jake Pavelka and one of her brothers and Jamie Otis, who was a contestant on Ben Flajnik's season, had a brief relationship. Chances are JoJo knew exactly what to expect to happen on the reality show. Follow Nicole Weaver on Twitter @nikkibernice Look at The Entertainment Cheat Sheet on Facebook!
