More AP MLB, and Gregory Payan / Associated Press New York Yankees announced several changes to their farm system structure, including the reorganization Double-A Trenton Thunder in Somerset, New Jersey. New York Yankees @Yankees More about new full-season affiliates: Yankees also recalled affiliation with Staten Island (former home of short season Yankees single). Charleston, South Carolina (ex-home high single by Charleston RiverDogs) and Pulaski, Virginia (previous home of the former in conjunction with various partners, the Yankees are eager to make sure the team from the independent Atlantic League calls Staten Island home in 2021. New York will continue to operate short-term Gulf Coast League and Dominican Summer League teams in addition to Triple-A Scranton Wilkes-Barre RailRiders. In addition, the Yankees' High Singles team will be based out of the Hudson Valley, New York. The Tampa Tarpons, who were a branch of Yankees High Single-A, will move to a low single-A designation. The moves are the result of the expiration of the Professional Baseball Agreement between MLB and Minor League Baseball and the creation of a pipeline of promising development that the Yankees described as a joint effort between MLB and U.S. Baseball to establish official identification and a pathway for player development for amateur baseball players in the United States. As the Yankees noted, the number of minor league baseball teams affiliated has declined from 160 to 120, and former shortstop season rosters are absorbed into the pipeline of promising development. According to a statement from the Yankees, the move from Trenton to Somerset was the result of a decision made strictly on the basis of what we consider to be the best facility for the development of our young players. The move from Tampa to the Hudson Valley was made based on a long-term and huge successful relationship with Yankees minority owner Marvin Goldlang, whose Goldlang Group managed RiverDogs. As away as the major league club goes, the Yankees plan to start the 2021 season at home against the Toronto Blue Jays on April 1. 1.
