

Dr. Jeffrey Payne
Senior Research Fellow

Jeffrey Payne currently serves as an Assistant Professor at the Near East South Asia (NESA) Center for Strategic Studies. He pilots NESA's maritime security programming, including its ongoing series devoted to the Indian Ocean Region and wider Indo-Pacific. In addition, he leads NESA's engagements relating to maritime and littoral information sharing/data analysis.

Mr. Payne conducts analysis on Chinese foreign policy, Indian Ocean regional affairs, and maritime security. He is particularly interested in the intersection of maritime security and strategic competition in the Indian Ocean, as well as how technology and information can assist in furthering security cooperation. His work informs the United States Combatant Commands, the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and interagency efforts inside the United States government. Mr. Payne takes part in United States efforts relating to Maritime Domain Awareness and helps facilitate discussions across bureaucratic seams existing in the Indian ocean. He has presented before international conclaves, security forums, and defense institutions in Europe, the Middle East, South Asia, and East Asia. His research has appeared in edited volumes, peer-reviewed journals, and security-related publications.
