fxr file format is now available! Feature Comparison of v0.32.0 vs. v0.3.1 Alarm and Timer now can be set to range between 00:00:00 and 23:59:59 (24 hour range). You can add/remove this feature by selecting "configure alarm" in the Alarm screen (right click menu). When using the Alarm, Timer or Time Calculator functions, the counter will show current time. When they are set to range the counter will show the range of 00:00:00 to 23:59:59. The old time range was 0:00:00 to 23:59:59 (24 hour range). The alarm and timer functions are now separated. Alarm will now start the alarm function but it won't start the timer function. Similarly the timer will stop the timer function and continue the alarm function. This change will allow users to use the alarm and timer functions separately. You can stop the alarm function and continue the timer function. The alarm and timer functions are now set to use a 10 second interval. The old alarm and timer intervals were 30 and 90 seconds respectively. Changing the time range on a time calculator is now simpler. The new time range is 00:00:00 to 23:59:59. The alarm and timer functions have a new display. Alarm now shows the name of the current alarm. The time is shown as "Alarm Time". The timer shows the name of the current timer and the time is shown as "Timer Time". The name of the current day and month is also displayed. The alarm and timer functions have a new settings screen. The first tab is "Alarm" which has the following options: Sound: Sound is now a choice of "Beep" or "Tone". The Beep is no longer set by default. The Tone is set to be on by default. Sound file: "default": This means the default sound file is used. (If not set, the sound file will be generated by the system). "wav": WAV files will be used. This allows for an external sound file to be played. "mp3": MP3 files will be used. Volume level: The volume level of the sound. (The 520fdb1ae7
