Popstar never stop never stopping all songs

The music industry can seem like an overly serious and pretentious place, and evermore it seems necessary to have satirists like The Lonely Island to bring it back down to earth. Over the course of their work on SNL, and 3 albums (each of wildly inconsistent quality), the group has skewered just about every pop music trope out there. Their new film, Popstar: Never Stop Never Stopping takes aim at self-congratulatory music documentaries, from the likes of Justin Bieber and Katy Perry, and the soundtrack provides some of the best songs the trio has written since their early work. One of the defining qualities of the group's previous albums was the feeling that they potentially worked better as a collection of singles than as complete experiences, and that holds very much true for the Popstar soundtrack. The film follows the downfall of self-absorbed hip-hop star Conner4Real (real name: Conner Friel), and the best tracks on the soundtrack are drawn from his maligned second album "Connquest". The opening string of 5 songs (not including interludes) is easily the strongest straight run of tracks The Lonely Island has ever penned. Opener I'm So Humble is confidently funny, obviously juxtaposing the braggadocio of the style, with the pretence of humility in the lyrics – "people say I'm so unpretentious for a genius". There aren't a huge number of laugh-out-lines in the song, but it moves with a steady stream of chuckle-worthy lines, and the beat and Adam Levine-led chorus are so catchy it's hard to care. Equal Rights is easily the harshest critique The Lonely Island have ever doled out, aimed squarely at Macklemore and his questionable hit Same Love. Over a beat that eerily replicates the self-congratulatory bombast of the original song, Andy Samberg raps about the importance of equal rights, whilst spending the majority of the song protesting that he himself is "not gay". By the song's end he's abandoned his original subject matter, and is just listing hetero iconography – "titties", "sports", "Lynyrd Skynyrd" – and it's hilarious. The standout track is easily Finest Girl (Bin Laden Song). The song's premise is so blatantly absurd (it's about a girl who wants Samberg to "fk me like we fked Bin Laden"), and the group runs with the ridiculous metaphor so confidently – "she said "invade my cave with your special unit" / I said "he wasn't in a cave" but there was no stopping" – that the song becomes an escalating high-wire act of questionable taste. The concept sounds like it should be offensive, but because the band mocks absurd sexual metaphors instead of the actual politics, it ends up working perfectly. Unfortunately, like with the group's previous albums, much of the Popstar soundtrack can't compete with its strongest moments. The second half of the album contains songs with barely-there premises (Ibitha is an entire song about the Spanish accent sounding like a lisp), tracks from the Style Boyz (Conner's old boy-band), and tracks from Hunter the Hungry, another rapper who usurps Conner in the film. There's some strong moments (Incredible Thoughts and Legalise It are both quite funny), but it's dispiriting when the album goes several tracks without anything worthy of a laugh. Like their previous work, the soundtrack to Popstar: Never Stop Never Stopping works better as a series of singles and videos than as an album proper. However, said songs are some of the best of the group's career, and even when surrounded by an obscene amount of unnecessary bloat, they manage to make the album greater than the sum of its parts. The Lonely Island is proud to present the premiere vinyl release of the original soundtrack to POPSTAR: NEVER STOP NEVER STOPPING, courtesy of Mondo Music. Including nearly two dozen original comedic pop and hip-hop songs performed by The Lonely Island, and featuring artists such as P!NK, Adam Levine, Michael Bolton, and Seal, the soundtrack is pressed on 2x 180 Gram Black Vinyl, and housed in the album art for Connor4Real's debut album THRILLER, ALSO."Out of four possible stars, Rolling Stone has given it the sh*t emoji..." reads a scathing review of Conner4Real's fictional second solo album from the venerable music magazine. In our world, however, the music of POPSTAR: NEVER STOP NEVER STOPPING would warrant a perfect four out of four sh*t emojis, as The Lonely Island lovingly skewers pop music with brilliant glee. Catchy tracks like "Finest Girl (Bin Laden Song)," "Equal Rights", and "I'm So Humble" have earned their place among the greatest music parodies of all time. Expected to ship in 7-10 business days. The film from the Lonely Island crew -- Andy Samberg, Akiva Schaffer and Jorma Taccone -- focused on the travails of pop star Conner4Real, whose career takes a nosedive when his album flops, forcing him to reconsider a dreaded reunion with his old crew, The Style Boyz. While the long-time creative trio — including Andy Samberg, Jorma Taccone, and Akiva Schaffer — are perhaps best known for their "Saturday Night Live" digital shorts like "Dick in a Box" and "Lazy Sunday" and their wonderfully deranged big screen adaptation of their popular "MacGruber" sketches, just three years ago, they made another cult-classic-in-the-making in the form of "Popstar: Never Stop Never Stopping." Styled as a mockumentary examining the career and life (and incredibly bad life choices) of eponymous pop star Conner Friel (AKA Conner4Real) as he spirals hilariously out of control after years in the spotlight, the film sends up not just the music industry, but the entertainment complex as a whole. Plus, there's at least one painfully funny song about Osama Bin Laden, a signature dance move named (weirdly enough) after donkeys, Seal being mauled in service to a marriage proposal, and an entire subplot involving Michael Bolton. That's just a small sample of the giddy fun at play in the musical mockumentary, which also includes a charming message about the power of friendship (4Real!). When the film opened in June of 2016, it was considered a box office bomb, earning just $9.5 million against a reported $20 million budget. And yet, like "MacGruber" and even "Hot Rod," the film has attained something of a cult classic status amongst both Lonely Island super-fans and connoisseurs of smart comedy. Proof that it's continuing to earn acclaim: It's now set for a sing-along theatrical experience, the kind normally reserved for older films like "Spaceballs" and its ilk. Next month, 26 Alamo Drafthouse Cinema locations will exclusively screen a very special "Popstar" sing-along theatrical experience. Officially licensed by Universal Studios, the "unique interactive theatrical experience" kicks off a new partnership between the companies, with more events to come for a range of other catalog titles. "We're thrilled to partner with Alamo Drafthouse for this chance to give audiences a fresh, innovative experience at the theater with beloved films in our library," said Universal Pictures' Jason Jackowski, Vice President – Repertory (Theatrical Distribution) in an official statement. "Popstar" is just the latest cinema classic to get the Alamo Drafthouse Quote-Along and Sing-Along treatment, and the theater chain has recently enjoyed successes around films like "Labyrinth," "Spaceballs," and "Three Amigos." At the interactive Quote-Along, Sing-Along, and Movie Party screenings, the cinema-eatery's strict no-talking rules are "relaxed and audience members are encouraged to celebrate the film with interactive elements, like on-screen lyrics for all songs, plus subtitles for key quotes, and props." The "Popstar" event will feature inflatable microphones, glow necklaces, and ribbon wands. "The most important prop we're providing is probably the American flags for 'Finest Girl (Bin Laden Song),'" said Henri Mazza, Alamo Drafthouse's V.P. of Content, Sponsorship and Events, in an official statement. "Nothing makes me feel prouder to be an American than watching a crowd of people waving the flag while singing this patriotic tune." Check out the full list of participating Drafthouse locations below. Tickets for the "Popstar" Sing-Along are on sale now at Alamo Drafthouse locations across the country.
