In the 2000 presidential election, it became inevitable that America was finally divided into red and blue states. (Thank you, Tim Russert, for chasing this addictive quoting phraseology.) What if the division was broken even further, though, in the specific political problems with which each state is most consumed? In the present, working on data, such a feat is not only impossible, but also inevitable, even if we neglect the purpose of color coordinates based on the results. The map, created by the national real estate research website Estatefy, shows which topics each state has Googled more than any other state in the past 12 months. Estatefy ran hundreds of political search topics through Google Trends crunching data for this visualization, using candidates and political names, current events, controversial topics, and other different political terms to get to the heart of that on America's government mind. The results are surprising in spots-Washington is still hell fascinated by Dick Cheney- and exactly what you imagine in the other-Florida-obsessed Obama. In order not to miss anything in their affairs, some people prefer to list upcoming tasks in a laptop, while others have long started using digital technology solutions. Calendar apps are some of the main tools that are worth using to organize our lives and plan your time carefully. Many people have switched to specific tools; however, there are still some who don't use calendars on a daily basis. They may find some apps inconvenient to use, non-functional or expensive. In this article we are going to check out the best calendar apps to help you stay organized. Before downloading, as you are no doubt aware, there are all kinds of calendar apps available. Instead of sifting through hundreds of them, we've selected the 10 best calendar apps you can get. In addition to rave reviews from each of them, we've covered the following aspects when creating this list: The user interface - How you move the app should be smooth and simple. The buttons on the app should be clear, obvious and easy to navigate. Synchronization - whether with other calendar apps or other apps, app synchronization should be easy and improve overall experience with the app. Additional Features - Because there are so many options for calendars, many of these apps offer additional features. These features make apps stand out from other apps and provide a unique experience for you. 1. Any.do CalendarThis has direct integration with the to-do-Do List Any.Do, giving you a unique tandem of two apps. In addition to advanced functionality, Cal Calendar is easy to use. Creating events is very simple and fast. What's more, depending on the event name, the app automatically adds and geolocation data to the entry description. You can even import your lists and entries from Any.do.Any.do calendar is a great option for any type of user. This is very convenient and does not over-complicate the display mode. Another good thing is that this tool is available for free, so you can use it without spending a dime on the software. Download the Any.do calendar here!2. The Google Calendar Calendar is the official calendar for Android devices that has been tested by many users around the world. If you are now trying to get away from it, consider changing your mind. Since this app is installed on most Android devices by default, many users think that there is nothing special about this program. They're wrong. Google has been updating its calendar for quite a few years now, and now it comes in Material Design with advanced event features, direct integration into other Google services (such as support reminders and Google Now), and comes with Exchange support. The program is super easy and won't cost a dime for you. That's good, isn't it? Download Google Calendar here.3. IRL Event Social NetworkOne of the most unique apps on this list is the IRL Events Social Network app. As you can guess from the title, the main focus in this social networking app. Unlike other social media platforms, you can assume that this platform functions similarly Meetup.com. This is a site where you can connect with other people in your area who share a similar interest. IRL is that while at the same time providing a convenient calendar for you to plan activities and plan your day. Although it's a secondary focus, you're missing many of the synchronization aspects that other apps have on this list. Even so, because of this huge social function, it's worth considering for those who want to make more connections. Download IRL Events Social Network here.4. CalendarBusiness Calendar's business is aimed at people who use their calendar for business purposes and planning. It offers different modes with a wide range of configuration capabilities. The app provides the default view mode by month, and events can be marked in different colors. Display/sorting modes can be adjusted to your needs (month, day, year, or event). You can also set up a multi-day viewing mode to see how things look over the next few days. Scrolling up and down moves you by month, and if you check for a few days, they will be shown in more detail. Daytime display mode offers hourly planning, and schedule mode provides detailed for one event. The business calendar is a great tool for planning/planning cases, tasks and events. There is support for repetitive events that can be configured in just a few clicks. By purchasing software, you can use it to import and export other calendars, delete, copy, or move multiple events at the same time. Android The calendar app may seem a bit chaotic, but it works fine and easy to work with if you've been playing with it for a while. The full version of the app is available for $4.99, but you can also find a free version for the test drive app. Download the business calendar here.5. CalendarCalendar is a relatively new app. It works as a web app for both iOS and Android devices. It's an intelligent application that recognizes your contacts, schedules, and tasks. It will also help you plan and organize meetings according to your available time intervals. The good thing about the calendar is that it allows you to sync with other calendars you use, such as the Apple Calendar and Google Calendar. So you can manage all the calendars that you have in one place. The calendar also gives you an analytics of your meetings, giving you a clear idea of how you can improve time management.
