Have you ever lost your house keys and worried that a stranger is entering the country? If you are not the first occupant of the hotel, you can never be sure how many copies of your keys exist. Locksmiths usually charge for re-key individual lock, even if you bring it to your store. Since most homes have multiple doors with multiple locks, re-keying can get expensive. You can re-key lock as a professional at a fraction of the cost. Re-keying kits are available for most lock brands, but they are not interchangeable. You have to buy a kit for each brand of castle in your home. (If you're lucky, they'll all be the same brand!) Each kit will re-key six locks, but you can order extra contacts if you need to do more. The kit will work at the entrance and deadbolt locks, and it comes with two keys and all the tools you need except a screwdriver. But keep your current keys - you'll need them to remove the cylinder. We used the Schlage castle brand for this story. If you have a different brand, check your instructions for minor variations. Check out these important home security tips: Image SourceGetty Images Locking Yourself Out of Home can be incredibly annoying, especially if you're leaving in a hurry. If you misplace your keys or have left them inside, there is never a good time to be locked. Need help to prevent this again? It may be commonplace that happens to many of us, but there are a few simple steps you can take... 1. Leave your keys in the same place getting locked pretty often when you're juggling a lot of tasks at once - especially in the morning. A great way to prevent yourself from getting blocked is to always leave the keys in the same place. It sounds simple enough, but it does reduce the risk that you will ever lose them. Whether it's a trinket at your door or on a small brace, placing them in the same place every day will ensure that you always know where they are. Izzy Shulman, director of Keys 4 U, suggests: Start a pattern of behavior like tapping your wrist with a key before you close the front door when you leave the house. Eventually, it will become a natural instinct and you will never leave without keys. 2. Trust a friendAsk family member, close friend or neighbor to keep the spare key for your home safe (make sure they live relatively nearby, too). Top tip: Make a key swap with someone on your street and take care of each other. You never know when you will need the key to an emergency. If you live alone or can't always rely on a housemate to help you get into your home, To get the spare key cut and leave it with someone you can call in an emergency, says Izzy. And also Your home is safe, it also gives you the freedom to leave without the need for a key - and you never have to worry about losing it again. The inschemic locks are opened with a lot of code, while smart locks are opened when connected to the appropriate device via Bluetooth or Wi-Fi connection. So you can even open the lock using your smartphone, through the app, adds Izzy. In addition, installing a key safe outside your home allows you to keep a spare key nearby when you need it, without the security risks associated with leaving the key under the pot factory or mat. They work just like a non-key lock - via password, Bluetooth or Wi-Fi connection - and give you access to a spare key when you forget yours. Amazon 4. Ask for a helping hand If you live in a rented or shared accommodation, call your concierge or landlord. They will have a spare key and will be able to let you in while you are trying to find your missing. And if all else fails, call a professional locksmith. Putting the contact details of a local emergency locksmith into your phone saves time if you find yourself locked up and don't have an internet connection, says Izzy.'Emergency locksmiths will send a local professional immediately, so you're not left in the cold for long. They will be able to choose your lock or replace the damaged lock with a new model for peace of mind.'How this article? Strange fan stuff? Gang of kids get into a great adventure just for you. Stephen King a fan? We have your meandering horror story right here (and it's written by his son, Joe Hill, for good measure). Harry Potter? Check. The Chronicles of Narnia? Check. Even more surprising, however, is that the show serves another group exceptionally well: music lovers. The show's soundtrack goes remarkably hard, avoiding cliches and instead opting for some of the best indie rock and catchiest pop jams that the 2020 landscape has to offer. With each episode that finds Bode, Kinsey, and Tyler Locke exploring their house and learning about the powers of the magic keys, another song starts to play that you just have to figure out who it is. Some of these songs are by the names you've heard before, like this year's Album of the Year winner at the Grammys, Billy Eilish, while others may not be as loud. But if you song and wonder what it is, we have good news: they are all listed below, with a link to listen as soon as We've got your back.
