

"Sustainable Development in Higher Education around the Globe"

With this workshop, she wants to sensitize the audience for the different understandings and approaches of universities towards sustainable development. They, at the IAU, count Members in more than 120 countries all over the world. They are currently starting a cluster project; it will bring together higher education institutions from all continents to work together to achieve the sustainable development goals. The workshop will include examples from universities that they are collecting on our portal (www.iau-hesd.net) and will challenge participants of the workshop to rethink their own assumptions of what universities can do and ask them how they can do it together.

There will be room for lots of discussion.

TOGETHER WE CAN CHANGE
THE WEATHER

STEFANIE MALLOW, SWEDEN
FUNCTION PROGRAMME OFFICER
INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF UNIVERSITIES FRANCE

As programme Officer, she works mostly on the IAU key priority Higher Education and Research for Sustainable Development. In her work, she tries to combine HE, SD, and cultural diversity. When she was 19, she was motivated to make change after the 'culture shock' she experienced in Australia (they lacked culture). She is inspired by Arjun Appadurai: 'Modernity at Large: Cultural Dimensions of Globalization'. Her Costa Rican host family influenced her: she lived with them for more than 6 months and they showed her how sustainability can be part of a society in many more aspects than just labels.

