Inside you will find interviews, features and comics that cover all DD. App Store Google Play Web In addition to a sheet of characters, you have to have an adventure sheet. This sheet is a record of every session of the game. Treat your magazine magazine as an extension of a list of characters; This is your official report on your character! Fill the top of the sheet before playing your first adventure. At the end of each session of the game, fill in all the information provided, even if your character hasn't earned some of them (just put 0 on those lines). Most of the information on the sheet is self-evident, but some items carry additional explanations. Xp. You start playing with 0 Experience Points (XP). Gold. You start playing with any gold figures (gp) that you had after you purchased the initial gear. You can express silver pieces (sp) and copper pieces (cp) using decimal signs. Downtime. At the end of each adventure, your character will earn days of downtime that you can spend on various downtime activities. Your Dungeon Master will tell you how much downtime each adventure earns. You start with 0 days of downtime. Fame. You start playing with 0 notoriety points in your faction. If you don't have a faction, you don't track your notoriety (just fill in all the lines with 0). Magical objects. Keep the number of permanent magical items that your character possesses; write down the name of the item in the field of adventure notes. You start with 0 permanent magical items. Adventure Notes/Activity in Simple. to record notes from the adventure. At a minimum, you must record any magical items received (permanent or expendable). If you do downtime, note what kind of activity you are doing.
