My fellow Indians,

This is the first generation in the history of our nation that is walking out of college without a job offer or an internship opportunity. I have spent the last few weeks speaking with young people from different parts of our country and have come to hear some heartbreaking stories — of interviews cancelled, increments deferred, internships lost and jobs taken away. As I have heard these stories, I have sensed the pain and confusion and anxiety in our young people. And yet, I am inspired by their courage and optimism — their yearning for one opportunity.

As one brave nation, we are going to fight this crisis. We are going to beat this virus. And, we are going to lift India up, again. And, today, to make sure that young India is confident and upskilled and job ready as we rebuild our economy, I am proud to announce that we will provide 1000 internships to our young citizens. Not just that, to each intern, we will provide a dedicated training programme in career readiness and skill building.

Our vision is clear — our young citizens shall have an opportunity in hand, an experience to look forward to and when Fortune 500 companies come hiring in a few months, their work experience at a Forbes Under 30 organization shall make them stronger candidates in a global market. I'm going to fight hard for our young people and make sure that there will be no break on their CV and no brake on their career.

Yours in the service of our nation
