A cut above tree service mahomet

In many parts of the country, operating a tree service is a great way to make a living while helping people maintain their lawns. Before you can spend your days in the great outdoors, chainsaw in hand, you have to think about being bound. Bonds are certain, according to Surety & Fidelity Association of America, is a kind of insurance you can buy that guarantees your customers financial compensation if you fail to fulfill your agreement. Contact certain bond institutions in your area. Be aware that some bonds can definitely be provided by the Small Business Association of the United States. These kinds of bonds provide opportunities for smaller or minority-managed contractors to establish themselves from the bottom up. Complete the required bond form. Your bond provider needs to know a lot of information in order to set rates and assess the risks you propose to them. Bryant Surety Bonds, for example, asks business owners to submit financial information reports to anyone owning more than 5 percent of the tree company in question. Send credit information to your bond provider. Companies need to know what's on your credit report, because these numbers provide clues about your financial stability. Companies with faltering finances, for example, may be at much greater risk of leaving unfinished projects. Specify the type of bond you want to buy. Surety Office information indicates that several different information is available. The offer bond guarantees a special initial contract between your tree service and the property owner. Performance bonds give property owners money if you fail to prune the tree in question. Payment bonds ensure that you will pay subcontractors who may be involved in the project. Pay the premium requested by consent. As JW Surety Bonds notes, the bonding process is fairly easy, and this section is pretty clear. Sign the bonds and return them to the company for sure. This bond is a legal contract that requires serious liability for the service of your tree. (You also receive the benefits, of course.) Keep a copy for your file and be ready to provide it to customers upon request. After all, the prospect of having a tree or tree limbs removed can be nerve-wracking for homeowners. It's reassuring to be able to prove to homeowners that your company is tied up, and they'll receive the service they requested. One thing you should remember about starting a tree service business is seasonal work. Early spring and late autumn are times for pruning and thinning of trees. Work related to trees damaged by high winds is likely in the season While there may be a bit of work cleaning trees torn down by winter storms, the weather itself will make it difficult for you to operate your business. Also keep in mind that you may have to travel in your work. The larger the geographic area you can cover, the greater your chances of getting a job [source: Alliance and Leicester]. Here's how to start tree service. Ads Register your business name and get a business license. Join the business, if you wish. Get a tax identification number from the IRS. Register your business with your country. You will receive a local tax identification number. Check if your country has a license requirement [Source: Business]. Open a business bank account. Get insurance. The business involves operating equipment that has risks attached to it. Accidents can happen, so make sure you have adequate public liability insurance, as well as disability insurance for yourself and your employees [source: UFL]. Buy all necessary equipment, including trucks, ladders, saws, chain saws, trimming equipment, and safety equipment. Determine how much it will cost for various services. Make sure your prices are competitive. Advertise your services in your local newspaper and send flyers to all homeowners in the neighborhood. Build a website for your business. There's been a lot of talk about cord cutting and live TV subscriptions lately. Services that offer live streaming of broadcast and cable channels really hit the mark when it comes to content. Many traditional cable package subscribers are turning to alternative ways to watch shows they love. If you're on the fence, and are thinking of switching from a traditional cable package to a cable lite, we do some research and have some thoughts on where you should spend your hard-earned cash. Why would you want a live TV streaming service instead of cable? The decision to cut the cord can be very difficult for some people. On the surface, it looks like this live TV streaming service option cost almost as much as cable, but it doesn't even offer that much content, whether you want it all or not. I can't say that cutting the cord is the right decision for everyone, and I can't decide for you. There are pluses and minuses both options. Cable subscriptions can be very convenient. When you do an all-in on a package deal that includes internet, cable, and phone, the overall price is discounted from what others might pay for individual services. Plus, you only to pay one bill, not three. However, there are some conveniences with live TV services that free you from the restrictions that cable providers provide. The live TV service lets you stream all available content from a single app on multiple devices, including mobile. So you can open one app to watch shows on your Apple TV and then switch to your iPhone for a bus ride, then to your iPad or even a computer while you're at work. You don't need to download six different channel apps and log in to each app. When there is an update, it only happens in one application instead of a group of them. There is also no equipment rental. You don't need to add additional boxes to your living room to watch pay-TV channels that you can already enter on your Apple TV or Amazon Fire TV. With live TV services, you pay for what you see. There is no annual contract to sign or hidden fees and taxes. If you subscribe to the service for $39.99 per month, you pay $39.99 per month. You won't be charged a cancellation fee if you decide it's not right for you. How much does a cable cost, anyway? The numbers vary drastically, depending on what you think paying for cable means. This can be as low as $9 for a single app subscription for a service like Starz or HBO. But traditional subscription plans, according to a recent report from the FCC, expanded base service rates by an average of about $69 per month, excluding taxes, fees and equipment rental costs. Fortune noted in September 2016 that, when you take into account hidden fees, rentals, and taxes, the average is closer to $103 per month. The great ads you see on television don't highlight the extra costs that are folded into the final price. With live TV streaming services, you pay for what you see. You don't have to rent boxes or pay weird taxes you've never heard of, and you don't have to call your cable company every year, threatening to leave if they don't let you save the promo deals you're registering. If you've been contemplating leaving cable behind and becoming a cord cutter, there are five major live TV streaming services you can check that offer pay-TV content at cheaper prices and without contracts. The five best live streaming TV services you can get now I might have to show these live streaming TV services are all very similar when it comes to the content they offer. There are a few exceptions, which I note, and your location is important to consider for some options, such as sports channels. But, for the most part, they offer much of the same content. Pricing options, viewing variations, and is something you should consider when making your choice. This is what every service offers. Hulu with Live TV What content do you get and how much does it cost? Hulu with Live TV covers about 50 channels. Local channels will be determined by your location, but include cbs, NBC, Fox, and ABC broadcast channels. It also includes several large pay-TV channels, such as A&E, Bravo, Food Network, FX, History Channel, CNN, Disney Channel and Disney XD, ESPN, and Cartoon Network. Live TV does not include AMC, Comedy Central, Nickelodeon, Starz, and Discovery Channel. It also includes Hulu's basic on-demand content, which is a large library of shows available the day after they air or shortly after a season finishes. You can subscribe to Hulu with Live TV as low as $39.99 per month, but can add up to more than $70 if you add additional features, such as additional DVR storage, commercial free viewing, unlimited screens, and Showtime. What are the sports options? Hulu with Live TV includes the Big Ten Network, CBS Sports, ESPN, ESPN 2, ESPN SEC, CSPN News, ESPN U, FoxSports 1, and FoxSports 2. Depending on your location, CNBC also has several sports channels. Does have a basic Price DVR feature for Hulu with Live TV equipped with 50 hours of DVR shows and movie recording and playback. You can't fast-forward through ads with a basic plan, but for $14.99 per month, you can upgrade to 200 hours of DVR cloud storage and have the ability to fast-forward through ads with recorded content. What can you watch? Currently, Hulu with Live TV is available on iPhone and iPad, Android devices, Apple TV (4th generation), Chromecast, and Xbox One. The company has noted that more devices will be supported in the future. Who it is for Hulu with Live TV is perfect for people who are currently without cable in any form, but want to add live streaming TV to their entertainment experience. This is a convenient upgrade of your existing Hulu subscription. You get all the same on-demand content as before, plus a lot of live streaming content that you can ultimately watch on demand, too, thanks to the DVR cloud storage feature. See on Hulu Sling TV What content do you get and how much does it cost? Sling TV offers a wide range of content through three levels of subscription options and a la carte add-ons. The basic package, called Orange, comes with 30 channels, including several major cable channels such as AMC, CNN, Cartoon Network, Comedy Central, Disney Channel, ESPN, Food Network, Travel Channel, and Lifetime. The second-tier plan, the Blue plan, includes many regional sports channels, plus some extras that aren't available in the Orange plan, such as Bravo, CNN, FX, and a few more. The Blue package does not include ESPN, Disney Channel, IFC, Travel Channel, and several others. That's why there's a third level, combo package, that includes Orange and Blue content. You can add additional package channels for sports, comedy, news, various language channels, and lifestyle. There are also four additional add-on packages that include four popular popular package channels price two. Packages range in price from $5 to $10. Sling TV also offers premium channels HBO, Cinemax, Starz, and Showtime for between $9 and $15 per month. TV slings start at $20, but can add up to quite a bit if you add additional channel packages. For example, if you subscribe to the Orange and Blue combo plan for $40 and add a sports add-on for $10, the News add-on for $5, and HBO for $15, your monthly fee will be $70. What are the sports options? With the orange Sling TV package, you get ESPN, ESPN 2, and ESPN 3. You can add some additional ESPN channels, NHL Network, NBA TV, and some smaller sports channels. The Blue plan includes local and regional sports content from FoxSports 1 and 2 and Comcast. It also includes NFL Network and NBC Sports. You can add the Sports Extra package, which includes the NFL's RedZone, NBA TV, NHL Network, and more. Does it have the DVR feature it does, but only on certain devices. DVR support is only available on Apple TV, Roku, Android TV and Android devices, and Amazon Fire TV. Sling TV only offers 50 hours of storage for $5 - no upgrade rate - but you can keep recordings for as long as you like. Some channels, such as ESPN, ABC, and Fox, offer no support for DVR recording at all. What can you watch? Sling TV is available on Amazon Fire TV, Chromecast, Roku, iPhone and iPad, Apple TV (4th generation), Mac, Android devices, Windows devices, Xbox One, and more. Basically, only the PlayStation 4 is not supported by Sling TV. For whom Sling TV is the most flexible live TV streaming service, it's the perfect entry-level option for people who've never paid for cable TV and don't like the idea of paying a lot for a monthly subscription but like the idea of an à la carte channel selection option. No, that's not true à la carte, but it's as close as you can get from content providers now. It's also the perfect downgrade option for today's cable customers who are tired of paying a lot of money for channels they don't want. Through various add-on options, you can get really close to having the right channel options at your disposal at a much lower price. See on Sling TV DirectTV Now What content do you get and how much does it cost? DirectTV Now starts from 60 channels, including AMC, Animal Planet, BET, Bravo, Cartoon Network, Comedy Central, Discovery Channel, Disney Junior and DX, FX, History Channel, USA, VH1, and more. Three of the four main broadcast channels include: NBC, ABC, and Fox. Notably, DirectTV Now includes some Viacom channels that are not available on most other live TV streaming services, Nickelodeon, MTV and Spike TV. There are four levels of subscription service. The Live a Little plan includes 60 channels for $35. The Just Right plan includes 80 channels for $50. Go Big Big Package 100 channels for $60, and the Gotta Have It package includes 120 channels for $70. You can add on HBO for just $5 per month (the cheapest a la carte price for HBO), Cinemax for $5, and Starz for $8. What are the sports options? The lowest price levels include ESPN 1 and 2 and some regional sports broadcasts. Other tiers include the Big Ten Network, ESPN News, ESPN SEC, and ESPN U, as well as Fox Sport 1. Third and fourth tiers include Fox Sports 2 and NBC Golf. Does have nope DVR feature. DirectTV Now, instead, directs you to its on-demand content. You also can't quickly forward or rewind live TV content. You can only pause him. What can you watch? You can watch DirectTV Now on Amazon Fire TV, Apple TV (4th generation), Android devices, Chromecast, and iPhone and iPad. You can also stream content from the web in Internet Explorer, Chrome, and Safari. Who it is for DirectTV Now is a good choice for AT&T customers because the company offers some price cuts steep enough to use its Unlimited data plan. Total plans are down by $25 per month through credits used for AT&T's $90 data plan; T Unlimited. That makes DirectTV's lowest rate now only $10 per month. See on DirectTV Now PlayStation Vue What content do you get and how much does it cost? PlayStation Vue has a four-tier channel package starting at $39.99 per month. The basic Access Level includes 45 channels including AMC, Animal Planet, Bravo, Cartoon Network, FX, TBS, USA, and more. Core Level adds about 15 more channels and enhances regional and national sports content. The Elite tier includes 90 channels and actually issues full pay-TV channel content. The Ultra tier includes 90 channels from the Elite level, plus HBO and Showtime. You can add an Epix Hits channel package for $4 per month and a Español Plan for $5 per month. You can also add HBO, Showtime, Cinemax, Machinima, Fox Soccer Plus, and Polaris individually. There are two channel combo packages, HBO + Cinimax and Epix Hits + Showtime. What are the sports options? The lowest price levels include ESPN 1 and 2, Fox Sports 1 and 2, and some regional sports broadcasts. Other tiers include the Big Ten Network, ESPN News, ESPN SEC, and ESPN U. Third and fourth tiers include Fox College Sports and NBC Golf. Does have dvr feature Yes. You can save an unlimited number of hours to your DVR storage, but the content will only be available for about a month. Plus, most channels include the ability to pause and replay live TV with some restrictions on certain channels. What can you watch? PlayStation Vue is available on PlayStation 4, PlayStation 3, Apple TV (4th generation), Chromecast, Android and Android TV, Amazon Fire TV, iPhone and iPad, and Amazon tablets. You can also stream content from the web with Firefox, Chrome, Safari, Internet Explorer, and Microsoft Edge. Who's Who for if you're a heavy PlayStation 3 or 4 user, Vue is a great choice because you don't have to switch to another device to use it. Due to the large selection of channels, both basic and premium, it's the best option for cable subscribers who are ready to cut the cord, but still want a lot of pay-TV content. See on PlayStation YouTube TV What content do you get and how much does it cost? YouTube TV is an upcoming live TV streaming service from YouTube. This includes the four main broadcast channels ABC, CBS, NBC, and Fox, as well as, pay-TV channels such as AMC, Bravo, Disney Channel, ESPN, FX, IFC, Sundance, USA, and more. It also includes a YouTube Red Originals subscription (different from YouTube Red). YouTube with Live TV costs $35 per month and includes six accounts. Which means six different people can have six different login credentials, but have access to all live TV content. You can add on Showtime for $11 per month and Fox Soccer Plus for $15 per month. What are the sports options? It comes with ESPN and ESPN 1, Fox Sports 1 and 2, The Big Ten Network, ESPN SEC, NBC Sports, CBS Sports, NBC Golf, and some regional broadcast sports content. For an additional $15 per month, you can add Fox Soccer Plus. Does have dvr feature Yes. You can record an unlimited number of hours across all six accounts and saved content will be stored for up to nine months. You can fast forward and backward via Live TV (with pauses to catch up, of course), although you can't fast-forward through on-demand content. What can you watch? YouTube TV is available on iPhone and iPad, Android phones, Chromecast, and Android TV. Support for more devices is expected later this year, but you'll also get a free Chromecast after your first monthly payment. So even if it never comes to Apple TV, you can still watch it without having to mirror it from your iPhone or iPad. For whom YouTube TV is a great choice for families or households with roommates who want to watch their own content. You can stream live TV on three devices at the same time, so it will be easy for everyone to feel they have their own content, but they don't have to pay for it individually. Currently, YouTube TV is limited in availability only to Chicago, Los Angeles, New York City, Philadelphia, and San Francisco. It will be a while before it is available in all areas. You can sign up for email notifications when your city is supported. See on YouTube TV Your thoughts? Have you tried all the live TV streaming services and decided which one is right for you?
