

Jamesia Poindexter, a Charles County resident, started dancing at an early age. Showing a love of dance, she began taking recreational classes at four years old. Her fondness grew while dancing at Dance Depot in Waldorf, MD. Quickly falling in love with tap, hip hop and jazz, Jamesia started dancing competitively two years later. While still dancing at Dance Depot, Jamesia wanted to expand her dance career and began to dance with The JaM Youth Project and Woodbridge Dance Company. At the age of fourteen, Jamesia began assisting with classes, then moved on to teach her own dance classes at the age of sixteen. After graduating high school, Jamesia attended Bowie State University (BSU) majoring in Social Work, with a minor in dance. Jamesia has choreographed for and danced with the BSU Impact Dance Ensemble, while continuing to teach at Dance Depot. For the past few years, she has taught a broad range of dance genres, including, tap, jazz, hip hop, contemporary and musical theater. Jamesia's passion for dance continues to run strong and she is excited to have this amazing opportunity to teach with B.Funk!
