People need their cars to get around, so there's always a need to keep running smoothly. If you want to open a car shop the right way, getting started will take a bit of time, some solid training and planning. You don't technically need any instruction to open a car shop, but your business will get a certain amount of respect if your mechanics are adopted by the National Institute of Automotive Service Excellence. Of course, you can always hire mechanics who follow this route, but the odds are that if you want to open a mechanic shop, you are a mechanic yourself. To get an ASE certificate, you'll need two years of on-the-job training. You can do some of this through formal education, such as a business school or community college, or you can follow your path quickly by taking an ASE certified certification program. Having accumulated two years of credit, you have to pass a written test, and it's not easier, either. Only two-thirds of people pass the exam on their first attempt. It is true that you can succeed as a general mechanic throughout, but the shops that specialize can actually bring in more customers if they are playing it smart. You probably live in an area with extremely busy highways and jamming turn. Wouldn't you want to open a mechanic's shop that specializes in collisions in an area where collisions are likely to occur? Or you may have noticed that there are a few shops that specialize in sending in the area. You can fill this hole. With ASE certification, you can choose a specialty from specific car manufacturers for things like truck equipment, heavy machinery and collision repair. If you want to open a car shop, know that the site is everything. Your company probably won't succeed if you choose to create your business in an area with a few cars or where a few people drive. For example, a mechanic who opens a store on Bald Head Island in North Carolina will certainly fail unless he is in the golf cart trade because the island does not allow cars. For a traditional mechanical shop, the location near the highway or the place where people regularly collapse is your best bet. Also, make sure that Enough space for all the elevators you need and a customer car park. Opening car shops is not cheap. You are likely to spend about $4,000 per elevator and $4,000 on related insurance each year. Your tools can cost about $15,000 just to get started, and the diagnostic device alone is $5,000 to $10,000. With all startup costs, you could spend about $25,000 to just $75,000 to open your store, and this can go up if you buy your lot instead of renting it. Overall, this is not much compared to most companies, but it is certainly not a small piece of change. If you don't have this type of financing yourself, you might want to consider approaching a bank or small business management to get a loan. Make sure you have a strong business plan to get the absolute best prices. Each work must go through the same legal hoops. You need to form a legal business entity (LLC, S Corp, etc.), register with the IRS and get an employer's identification number so you can pay taxes. You will also need to obtain a commercial license from your local government and get the required insurance. For a car dealership, you'll need a general liability plan, but you'll also need workers' compensation if you plan to hire employees. Commercial car insurance is not required, but it is a good idea. This protects your company if any of your employees are in an accident while driving a customer's car around your lot. After you get the right insurance, you can start hiring employees. Auto shops generally make most of their money from 10 popular services that average it at $144.10 per job. This includes: oil and lubrication (which represents about 20 jobs per week on average) alignment diagnostic brake services A/C recycling repair/recharging e-engine control services e-engine control services spark replacement replacement replacement replacement replacement replacement make sure that your prices remain competitive. A/C services generally rake in the most on average $276 per job. Brake services come in second place with an average of $223 per job. Oil and oil is on average cheaper $30 per job. The car shop won't work if no one knows it's there. Advertise your online store with services like Yelp, Google and Angie's Menu. Also consider inviting companies to withdraw and give them incentives to refer customers because they are, in all, dealing with broken cars. Coupons for discounted services, such as $10 oil changes, will help bring in new customers who may become repeat customers.
