The People behind Angelic Wolves returns with their other efforts titled Bloody Mary: Having. Just as with wolves, Bloody Mary was shot, edited, and scored all the iPhone 6! Through the director, it is meant to be another horror comedy hybrid (sort of similar to the Sharknado genre, scary movie franchise, etc.). I'm not going to bother too much with the plot summary of the film, which is just over 22 minutes long. It's only $1.99 to watch on Amazon and I suggest you do it even if it's just to see how much you can do with your mobile device these days. Immediately at bat we introduced two person cast: Mike (Cam Holmes) and Sam (Megan Lynn Iosue) are in a long-term relationship. Over the next 20 minutes we showed the story of a woman who decides to play a childhood game bloody mary when she finds a mysterious package. Make a long story briefly if she plays by the rules and Mary will show you the love of her life in her destiny. If not, she's fucked up. The rules are as follows: Light a candle in one hand, hold the mirror in the other. Close your eyes and sing Bloody Mary six times. Take a deep breath, lift the mirror to your face and perhaps find your prince. As viewers, we know things are not going to go as planned, it's just a matter of what's wrong. For this reason, I'm really watching this scene to see what happens. All I could come up with was that she didn't really have a candle or mirror. It's never talked about what is like a bummer. Either way, from here we get a couple of SUPER creepy images, really a huge leap of fears and generally quite compelling history, even if it looks like a super small budget. By the way, when you remember the fact that this is a movie being shot, edited, and scored on all iPhone 6 it's actually quite impressive (especially considering how many assholes online still upload videos to a YouTube portrait). There are some things that really remind you you of watching iPhone video, including some audio issues, some massive red-eye issues (which I actually thought might be part of the plot at once) and special effects in several scenes that are clearly limited By the way, as I said earlier it's definitely worth watching, even if it's just to get some interesting things you can do with your cell phone ideas. First, a young nursing assistant disappears, her body is never found. Now patients are turning dead battered without recognition, soaked in blood, their eyes ripped off. Mary's wrath began. Freed from her eternal prison for the reflection of the mirror, she frees a murderous, manical rage on the refuge. Moving to will through mirrors, she strikes when her victims are unsuspecting, unarmed, and one. The legend of bloody Mary is real, her revenge is deadly, and to liberate her, all you have to do is say her name.
