One of the most popular footwear brands out there, Sorel is now owned by the world famous sportswear empire, Columbia Sportswear LTD. These boots find the perfect balance between function and fashion. For anyone living in or traveling north for winter, sorel boots are worth checking out. A competitor to UGG boots, their snow boots are designed to keep your feet warm inside if you've ever wondered, where are Sorel's popular winter snow boots made... you are in the right place. We cover everything you need to know about this popular brand below. The history and background of Sorel Sorel was founded in 1962 in Kitchener, Ontario, Canada. The brand began by creating premium handmade boots made mainly of rubber. The company was owned by Jacob Ratz Kaufman, owner of kaufman rubber company. Jacob Kaufman opened his very first rubber factory in 1908 on about 4 acres of land at King and Victoria Streets in Kitchener, Ontario. He soon began to create rubber boots sold around the world. Sorel challenges the status quo by creating unexpected footwear that the limits of function-first fashion In 1920, the company was handed over to his son Alvin Ratz, after Jacob Ratz Kaufman passed away earlier that year. Alvin Ratz did a phenomenal job of expanding the Kaufman Rubber Company, but when the Sorel brand was officially launched, he resigned as president and served as president for years to come. Sorel has a long history and has consistently made quality boots by putting functionality first. In fact, just like Canada Goose, their products were made to withstand harsh Canadian winters. Sorel Women's Lennox Hiker Booties, $219.95 at Zappos The Sorel Lennox Hiker boot takes tracks and scenic exits during both good and wet weather seasons The waterproof rubber boots were designed with fishermen, farmers and hunters in mind. Sorel boots became increasingly popular over the years, but due to the limited market crowd, they struggled financially. Sorel's financial struggle continued for several years until they finally filed for bankruptcy in 2000. Columbia Sportswear and Sorel Boots Columbia Sportswear Ltd scooped up the Sorel brand after they filed for bankruptcy in 2000. But the brand as we know it today was not officially launched by Columbia Sportswear until 2010. Columbia, with its talent in designing high-quality, fashionable winter wear and footwear, redesigned the Sorel boot to meet the needs of a broader global audience. One of the largest outerwear manufacturers in the world, Columbia took the functionality of Sorel boots and made it fashionable. Columbia Sportswear Company operates the brands Columbia, Sorel, Mountain Hardwear and prAna More specifically, the redesigned boot to make it more suitable for everyday use for both men and women. Retail sales moved quickly from hunting and trading stores to malls, stores and independent sellers worldwide. That said, the rebrand of Sorel boots didn't come cheap, and Columbia had to make some tough decisions about where to manufacture the Sorel line forward. Due to the high-quality nature of the boots, they are not exactly cheap to make. Manufacturing boots in North America became increasingly expensive, and led to products out of reach of the average consumer. Where Sorel Boots Is Made Due to rising manufacturing costs of sorel boots, Columbia Sportswear LTD moved, production facilities from Canada to China and Vietnam. As a result of this move, the cost of creation was cheaper, and the consumer purchase price was more affordable. According to Columbia, most of their footwear products are manufactured in three countries, with most (and specifically, Sorel) manufactured in both China and Vietnam. Columbia does not own the manufacturing facilities, but maintains contracts with several large manufacturing companies in countries around the world. In the past, Columbia all its products in Portland, Oregon. However, as the company grew in size and began to increase its annual revenues, the financial decision was made to contract manufacturing companies overseas to make their products. Sorel Caribou Waterproof Winter Boots, $160-$200 at Moosejaw The classic Sorel Caribou winter boots provide legendary warmth and protection in cold, snowy conditions In recent years, Columbia executives have spoken out about the tariffs imposed on companies that manufacture products overseas. In a Mad Money interview, Columbia's president, Tim Boyle, was very clear on the company's position in the context of overseas manufacturing. According to Boyle, Trump's tariffs on companies that manufacture products outside the United States are simply ineffective. We pay additional tariffs on these goods, as we have been very clear that it is bad for consumers globally, bad specifically for consumers in the United States, Boyle argues. We're free traders. We like the opportunity to sell more goods at better prices to consumers. To this day, Columbia is continuing to manufacture Sorel boots overseas. Where to buy Sorel Boots Sorel boots are available in stores in North America, Europe, Asia, and beyond. A global brand, many shoe companies sell these popular boots in their stores and online. Sorel also has its own website where you can buy a wide range of shoes. Most importantly, they ship all over the world. Sorel boots fit faithful size, so ordering Sorel boots online should be quite simple. Although they come in a wide range of sizes in length, there are no extra wide options for Sorel boots.
