stronger the similes and we provide a unique manner. Inserts for a visual metaphors is, read the similes and idioms metaphors which readers may recall them avoid for a while. They are very figures of speech used in literature and the arts, but also in daily life. Similes help the audience visualize the image of something they may not otherwise be able to imagine. For example, saying "as strong as a bull" helps the reader understand the strength being compared to a bull. Metaphors, on the other hand, make the comparison more direct. Saying "he is a lion" suggests not only that he is strong, but also that he possesses the qualities associated with a lion. These devices can be used to enrich language and make communication more effective.
