Commendations/Recognitions. Graspable Math. Graspable Math. One of the most important aspects of self-management for older adults with cognitive impairment is the ability to read, understand and correctly complete a variety of forms such as drivers licenses, Medicare and Medicaid, bank and credit card statements, automobile registration, utility bills and annuities. This instruction package will help you identify and use appropriate items from the above categories. This guide contains sample cover sheets for identification, a sample form, step-by-step explanations for proper handling of the forms and a Quick Reference Guide. The purpose of the handout is to introduce people with some deficits in cognitive skills who would like to handle their own personal records to understand basic record handling, and provide a template to record information in a consistent manner. Inside the Cover... What is contained in the Instruction Package... I. Objectives 1. Familiarize the individual with what should be contained on personal records 2. Demonstrate the individual's knowledge of the use and placement of the items on personal records 6. Review the types of tasks that the individual should be able to perform and address the quality of the information contained in the personal record (i.e., if you don't know, ask!) Introductory Reading and Viewing Activity... The exercise can be completed as a teaching tool, demonstration, information review and quiz. You can use the handout as a reference and respond to questions by referring to the pages. It can also be used to teach someone who may have a learning disability and may benefit from a cognitive understanding of their own personal record handling. What you will learn... You will be able to identify each type of form that should be placed on the person's personal records and understand the purpose of each form. 3. You 520fdb1ae7
