From. The company was founded in 1924 by carpenter Eugene Prevost (1898-1965), who previously specialized in benches for churches and furniture for schools. In 1924 he received an order to build the chassis of the REO bus. The company, then called Les Ateliers Prvost, subsequently received some overwork, there were very few one or two orders per year. But gradually the design of the buses changed and from the wooden they became metal (since 1945), the business developed and got back on its feet. In 1957, the company was acquired by Paul Normand. In 1969, two American businessmen formed a partnership with Andre Normand, who at the time was president of the company, so there were three owners. In 1995, the company was sold to Volvo Bus Corporation, but the Prevost brand was retained. As of February 2007, the company employs 1,337 people.
