He says he was not concerned about the inclination and intolerance shown by some fanatical Muslims, but rather the basis for such illusions in the Koran and the main Islamic The Jerusalem Post writes: Sina, who runs Faith Freedom International, an online forum dedicated to the Islam considers itself probably the greatest anti-Islam in the world. His latest book is called Understanding Muhammad: The Psychobiography of the Prophet of Allah. In it, Sina suggests that Muhammad suffered from a number of mental disorders, including. These disorders, he says, may explain a phenomenon known as Islam. Which is nothing more than one man's madness. Through his website, Sina lists references to Muhammad's actions and offers $50,000 to anyone who can refute his accusation that Muhammad was a narcissist, misogynist, rapist, paedophile, libertine, executioner, mass murderer, cult leader, murderer, terrorist, lunatic and robber. When asked why he was fighting Islam, he replied: When I read the Koran and felt that blood was dripping from every verse, when I saw islam reduce people to beasts and make monsters out of good people, when it became clear to me that there was nothing good in Islam and that it was all evil, I knew what I had to do. The time for prayer is over and now it's time for action.' although he was an atheist in his early years of activism, in his Twitter profile, Ali Sina describes himself as a Christian, writer, anti-Islam, anti-UN, vegan, conservative and pro-Israel. In a speech in October 2010, during the inauguration of the Freedom Party in Germany, the leader of the third largest party in the Netherlands said: Ali Sina, an Iranian Islamic apostate who lives in Canada, points out that there is one golden rule that underlies every religion - what we do to others the way we would like them to do to us. In Islam, this rule applies only to believers, but not to infidels. Ali Cena says: I am against Islam not because it is a religion, but because it is a political ideology of imperialism and domination under the guise of religion. Because Islam is not followed, it attracts violent people. On reforming Islam, Sina says that extremism in all religions can be eradicated if some people have calmed down, or if followers are encouraged to accept universalist elements of their faith - but without addressing the extremism inherent in the texts of religion. It's a bad parallel, he says. In Christianity, reform should have been needed not by religion, but by churches; what Jesus preached was good. On the other hand, Sina continues, in Islam, religion is not very good. With violent conquest and contempt for the unbelievers, the centrality of faith, says Cena, attempts to forge a moderate form of Islam are doomed. The only way to reform Islam is to throw away the Koran; Nine to 90 percent of it should be thrown away. You also have to throw away the history of Islam and you should completely ignore - the Arabic term used for various biographies Muhammad, who derives historical information about his life and the early period of Islam.'Claiming that Islam cannot be reformed, Cena says: This is a way of fighting evil. I don't want to kill the enemy. I want to win them over as friends and allies. It's a real victory. Thus, we will win because we eliminate our enemy, and our enemy wins, eliminating his ignorance and hatred. That's why I believe in my business. That's why I think I'm a tool of the world. While disagreeing with Cena for the fact that Islam is not a religion but a political ideology, write as Spengler, compares that to claiming that it is not a religion but a set of laws and rejects both. Spengler continues: Ali Sina and other Muslim secularists are just as wrong. I will argue that Islam is both a religion and a political ideology. Religion makes Islamic political ideology so dangerous.'He adds: Ali Cena is wrong: Islamic expansionism stems from religious motives, that is, a sacred rage against the encroachment of death on traditional society. In the form of Islam, the West faces a challenge quite different from communism. A biopic about Muhammad on September 25, 2012, the LA Times announced Ali Cena was working on Muhammad's biopic. The film will cost a total of 10 million dollars, and he hopes to start shooting in 2013. Cena began contemplating the biopic of Muhammad a decade ago, but stepped up his efforts in the past two years as technological advances made it possible to bypass state censors and cautious exhibitors.
