Stephen RussellRussell in October 2017OccupationActor, voice actor, playwright, theatre directorChildren2 Stephen L. Russell is an American actor, voice actor, playwright and theatre director. He is best known for his voice roles in video games as Garrett in The Thief, Corvo Attano in Dishonored 2 and various characters in Skyrim and the Fallout series. [1] [2] Career Russell appeared on stage in Huntington's The Last Hurrah. Other stage credits include Life of Galileo (Underground Railway Theatre), Bottom of the Lake (WHAT), Daughter of Venus (Boston Playwrights Theatre), A Pinter Duet, House Without Walls, White People (New Repertory Theatre), And then there were no, Prayer for Owen Meany (Stoneham Theatre), Talley's Folly (The Lyric Stage Company of Boston), and more than two dozen productions with the Wellfleet Harbor Actors Theater (WHAT), including Leenane's Beauty Queen and Elliott Norton-winning New War production. [3] He has been the author of 13 plays for young audiences and won the WHAT Award for Sustainable Artistic Excellence in 2009. Russell made his debut as Bob in the 2007 film Noëlle, and in 2008 he was the first to be filmed. In 2009 he played a minor role in the film Ghosts of the Past girls. In addition to expressing Garrett in the video game series Thief, he voiced Garrett's lead antagonist Karras in Thief II: The Metal Age, as well as many supporting characters in the series. He contributed to the voice of the central computer of XERXES and William Bedford. in The Shock 2 system. He also cast the votes of Andy, Mr Buckingham, The Great, Wadsworth, Sergeant RL-3, Cerberus, the enclave scientists, the enclave soldiers and every Mr Handy in Fallout 3, Fallout 4 and Fallout 76. The 2011 game Skyrim features Russell expressing a range of characters, including a talking dog barbas, the daedric Prince Clavicus Vile, Belethor and The Guild of Thieves leader Mercer Frey. In 2015's Fallout 4, he votes codsworth and android detective Nick Valentine. He gave voice to Lord Protector Corvo Attan in the 2016 video game Dishonored 2. Russell did not return to the Thief franchise for the 2014 reboot because he used acting to record movements, which required voice actors to physically portray characters and perform their own stunts. Eidos-Montréal announced that Russell had been replaced by Romano Orzari for the role of Garrett on the series, and explained their decision: The actor playing Garrett should have been able to perform his own stunts. Garrett's a really athletic guy. We could have reeled stephen's voice on top of someone else's actions and stunts, but this wouldn't seem natural. [4] The decision alarmed some fans of the show, who launched an online petition asking Eidos-Montréal to reinstate Russell as lead voice actor. [5] Personal life He is a vegetarian. He has a son Peter, who is an actor and musician, and a daughter Robin, who is a voice actress.
