What is usps media mail rate

Media Mail was formally known as the "book rate"; its title was changed to include different forms of media. One of many services offered by the United States Postal Service, it allows people to send packages at cheaper rates than most others imposed by the USPS or other companies. The Parcel Post was implemented by the Post Office in 1913; this is the same method that Media Mail now uses to ship packages. Media Mail is an easy and convenient way for people and businesses to send different types of media through the postal service. It takes a little bit longer than first-class mail, but media mail is offered at a much cheaper rate than other USPS services like the aforementioned Parcel Post, Priority and First Class. . Every package sent through Media Mail is subject to a search, and will be sent back if it contains items not permitted under Media Mail. The list of items eligible for media mail includes DVDs, books, CDs, software, sound recordings and tape recordings. Magazines are not considered media mail because they contain advertisements. Books or DVDs featuring small advertisements for related movies are permitted, however. Media Mail is one of the cheapest options when sending books through the USPS; however, when you are sending books from or to a library, you should use the cheaper Library Rate. Library Rates make it easier and cheaper for libraries to exchange books. If you have a book from a library that is located far away, you can send it at this rate instead of by Media Mail. The Media Mail price is based on the size of the box, but the minimum price you will pay for Media Mail is currently $2.23. This includes packages that weigh less than 1 lb. The rate steadily increases with each pound; examples include $10.98 for 26 lbs. and $19.38 for 50 lbs. The maximum weight for Media Mail is 70 lbs. A box cannot be any more than 108 inches in length and girth. On average, a Media Mail package takes 7 to 9 days to arrive, because it is delivered entirely by truck. The location can have a huge effect on the delivery time. If you are sending something from New York to California using Media Mail, it may take 2 weeks; but if you are sending it from New York to Connecticut it may only take 2 days. Purchasing delivery confirmation will let you know when your package arrives. pas de courier image by Secret Side from Fotolia.com By: Nicole Floyd Updated September 26, 2017 One expense of operating a business can be mailing expenses, which can be expensive if you are not familiar with the different choices a business owner or employee has to ship items. Media Mail is offered through the United States Postal Service as a way to ship discs (computer or music), books and videos. For shipments under 70 pounds, this is an inexpensive way to ship items for your business or for personal use. The Postal Service offers flat rate shipping. That means you pay one price for a specific size box and ship what fits into that box, as long as it is under 70 pounds. They also offer zone-based pricing, which means shipping prices are dependent on where packages are shipped. Priority Mail is usually delivered in two days, while Media Mail generally takes longer as it is not considered priority. Priority Mail prices begin at $4.90 and increase from there. With Media Mail, prices are based on weight and start at $2.38. With Priority Mail, the post office offers additional choices, such as delivery confirmation, insurance and the ability to require a signature for delivery. Media Mail does not offer these same services. You can stop USPS mail forwarding by canceling the temporary change of address order that initiated the mail forwarding process.
