The art book begins with a trip Joey and his mother and dog traveling to his father's house, where he craves and is nervous for what the next six weeks with his father will have in store for him. During the trip, Joey wonders about all kinds of things revolving around what to expect from his father. He was very impatient and nervous, but one thing is certain, it was comforting to know that his mother's own worries about Father Joey consume her thoughts so deeply, it no longer seemed that Joey and his condition was the only thing on her mind, something that he became quite accustomed to. Now finding a suitable medicine in the form of a hand patch for Joey's ADHD, Joey was able to settle down and think. And don't just think about all the bad things that've happened. He started thinking about the good things I wanted to happen.
