There are four sections. The audition test is recorded on a CD and is played only once. During the test, candidates are given time to read questions, write down and check their answers. The answers are written on the question paper as the candidates listen. As the recording ends, candidates are allowed to submit their responses to the answer sheet within 10 minutes. The recordings use a number of English accents, reflecting the international use of IELTS. Duration: 30 minutes Audition test is the same for both the IELTS academic test and the IELTS general learning test. You will need to answer 40 questions in response to four entries. You will listen to four recordings that are a mixture of monologues and conversations from different native speakers, and you will only hear each recording once. There are 10 questions for each part of the listening test. These questions test your ability to understand: Basic ideas and detailed factual information Opinions and relationship speakers Purpose utterance Ability to follow the development of ideas. Listening to the details of the part: Record 1 Conversation between two people set in an everyday social context. Record 2 Monologue, set in a daily social context, such as local objects. Record 3 Conversation between four people, set in an educational or educational context, such as a university lecturer and a student discussing a task. Record 4 Monologue on an academic subject, such as a university lecture. You can answer questions with multiple answers with one correct answer or more than one correct answer. Read the question very carefully to check how many answers are required. In a multiple-choice question where you need to choose one correct answer (A, B or C), you will be given a question that will be followed by three possible answers at the beginning of the sentence, followed by three possible ways to complete the sentence. In a multiple-choice question where you have to choose more than one correct answer, you will be given a longer list of possible answers and told that you should choose more than one answer. Multiple-choice questions are used to test a wide range of skills. You may be required to understand the specific points in detail or to understand the main points of the text being listened to. Sample issue Audio Recording You have to match a 20-dimensional list of items from what you hear in listening to the audio set Paper. A set of options can be some kind of criterion. Compliance evaluates the ability to listen for details and whether you can understand the information presented in the conversation on a daily topic, such as identifying different types of hotel or guest house accommodation. It also assesses your ability to follow conversation between two people. It can also be used to assess your ability to recognize the relationship and the relationship between the facts in the listening text. You will need to fill in the labels on the plan (such as buildings), a map (such as parts of the city) or a diagram (such as a piece of equipment). You can usually choose the answers from the list to the question paper. This relevant task evaluates your ability to understand, for example, the description of the place, and link it to the visual representation. This may include the ability to follow language expression instructions (e.g., straight to/turn left/opposite). Example Audio Issues In this task completion, you have to fill in the gaps in the outline part or the entire text of the listening. The plan will focus on the basic ideas/facts set out in the text. This can be: Form: used to record actual details such as names, addresses, phone numbers Note set: used to summarize information using a layout to show how different elements relate to each other's table: used to summarize information that falls into clear categories - such as place/time/price, flow chart: used to summarize a process that has clear stages, with the direction of the process shown. You will choose the missing words anyway; From the list submitted in the question paper From the record you must keep the word limit, indicate the instructions and use the exact words you hear from the record. You should read the instructions very carefully as the number of words or numbers you should use will change. The word limit is given, for example, NO MORE than two words and/or NUMBER. If you use more than a word limit, your answer will be labeled as incorrect, so check the word limit carefully for each question. Contract words will not be checked, for example, not. A hyphenated word is considered to be one word, such as a policeman. This task of completing the gap focuses on the main points that the listener will naturally record in this kind of situation. Example of the question Recording Example Issues Audio Recording Answers In this task of completing the sentence, you should read a set of sentences summarizing the key information from either: all text listening from one part of it. You then fill in the space in each sentence using the information from the text you listen to. The word limit is given, for example, NO MORE than one WORD and/OR NUMBER. You should read the instructions very how the number of words or numbers you should use will be The word limit is given, for example, NO MORE than two words and/or NUMBER. If you use more than a word limit, your answer will be labeled as incorrect, so check the word limit carefully for each question. Contract words will not be checked, for example, not. A hyphenated word is considered to be one word, such as a policeman. Completing a sentence focuses on your ability to identify key information in the text you listen to. You need to understand functional relationships, such as cause and effect. Example question Audio recording In the type of question of a short answer, you should read the question and then write a short answer using the information from the listening text. Sometimes the testers receive a question that asks them to list two or three points. The word limit is given, for example, NO MORE than two words and/or NUMBER. If you use more than a word limit, your answer will be labeled as incorrect, so check the word limit carefully for each question. Contract words will not be checked, for example, not. A hyphenated word is considered to be one word, such as a policeman. The short answer focuses on the ability to listen to specific facts, such as places, prices, or time, in the text of the listening.
