

LAVENDER MARKETPLACE & WORKSHOPS WEDDING FLOWERS

A BRIEF FLOWER GUIDE

Peonies, ranunculus, dahlias, & anemones are seasonal flowers that are not available during every month of the year. Sometimes a certain flower can be imported when out of season, but in my experience they are either not as pretty as they are when they are in season or very expensive, or both. I generally advise you to go with flowers that are in season.

Ranunculus and Anemones are springtime flowers that can sometimes be gotten as early as late January and are typically available until late April. They can sometimes be had as imports during the summer months - expect to pay more Peonies are late spring and early summer. They start as early as the latter part of April and can be found until early June. I also see them as imports during December and now, due to their popularity, late summer, but expect to pay more for them and have them in more than just your bouquet.

Dahlias are a summer flower and can be seen starting late June and through later September. Can sometimes be had in October, but color choices are limited.

PRICING

Also keep in mind that styled shoots and oftentimes real weddings that are published have high or unlimited budgets. I understand it is difficult to know how much flowers cost and how to create your budget for wedding flowers. Here's a quick breakdown of popular flowers and some greenery from the top end of the price scale to some beautiful flowers that fit into any budget:

Luxury: Peonies, Garden Roses, Vanda Orchids, Colored Hydrangea (except light blue), Calla Lilies, Stephanotis, Tropical flowers such as Protea & Anthirium

Premium: Standard roses, Spray Roses, Cymbidium Orchids, Dendrobium Orchids, Dahlias, White & light blue hydrangea, Ranunculus, Anemones, Dusty Miller, Exotic Foilage, Italian Pittosporum and Italian Ruscus

Standard: Sunflowers, Gerbera Daisy, Spider Mum, Delphinium, Larkspur, Eucalyptus, Stock, Lemon leaf, Israeli Ruscus

Economical: Alstromeria, Iris, Carnations, Accent Flowers such as Waxflower or Babies Breath, Leather fern

My goal is to work with within your desired price range to create wedding flowers that fit your style. Which is why I will ask how much you'd like to spend on wedding flowers prior to our consultation. A typical wedding can range range $1900-$3500 (including set up fees & tax) depending on style and flower selection. Below is some average pricing per item to assist you in creating your own floral budget.
