Nothing could be better for Romeo. But it was all going to come to a screeching halt as a result of a miscommunication with a woman. A misunderstanding that cost him dearly. Romeo and his friends decided to hold a soirée at the beach. It was going to be the ultimate party. You name it, and the party had it. Girls and boys, old and young, the whole nine yards. It was going to be a night to remember. The only thing missing was a guy to stand by the DJ's booth and do the best job possible. It was December, and since he was the only other single guy, Romeo volunteered. The guy he was going to take was his best friend. The night arrived and everything was going smoothly . A smooth transition between songs, a smooth transition between ideas and ideas. It was a smooth night. But then, a soft pitter-patter of feet was heard. It was time for the DJ to take his spot in the booth. A soft voice came to Romeo's ear and he heard her say, "You can't do this to me." She said this because he was stepping on her feet and cramping up the DJ's moves. At the time, Romeo didn't care. He was in the mood and the night was going to be the best night of his life. He had the money to pay for it and the chicks were lining up for the dance floor. Romeo couldn't wait. The night was flowing like wine . He was like a beehive with bees on a mission. A flurry of girls, a dash of boys and he was finally about to experience the most intimate of all social settings – partying with the girls. He'd been waiting for this moment since junior high. He missed his friend from the other party. He wanted to introduce him to all the girls. The music was blasting and the girls were cranking. Romeo was about to enjoy his life . He walked up to the DJ and offered to take his place. A look of confusion came across the DJ's face. He couldn't believe that Romeo was volunteering to switch. "You can't do this to me," she protested. Romeo looked at her 520fdb1ae7
