We need to teach time management to nursing students. Many students have poor time management skills, which affect their academic performance. Some students fail in nursing school because of inadequate time management. Effective time management can help nursing students reduce anxiety, improve their academic performance, and balance their personal lives. Practices should be introduced early in their academic years. A study conducted by Bayoumi et al. (in 2014) showed that poor grades and low academic motivation are directly related to time management issues. The study also demonstrated that extra workshops and training sessions can significantly improve students' time management skills. Therefore, it is crucial for nursing management to focus on teaching time management skills to students. This will ensure that students are prepared for the demands of the field and can handle their responsibilities effectively.
