Bridget (The Untouchable Queen) is the strongest ranked Pandora. During class, physics teacher and training instructor Yu-Mi Kim talks about her experiences as Pandora during the last battle against Nova; which was finally won thanks to the sacrifice of his squadron mate Kazuha Aoi. Meanwhile, Kazuha's brother Kazuya is transported to the Academy of Western Genetics by student president Chiffon Fairchild and given a summary of the nature of Pandoras and Limiters. Kazuya arrives while Satellizer is in a battle against second-ranked Pandora, Ganessa Roland; Kazuya confuses Satellizer with her late sister and hugs her, provoking an embarrassing reaction from her and leaving her open to attack. Title Notes: Untouchable Queen is the sobriquet of Satellizer L. Bridget Episode 2 Pandora Mode 2011-01-17 Introductory Arc Because of Kazuya's interference, Satellizer lost the battle against Ganessa, who is now Pandora's second-year number one. Kazuya wants to apologize to Satellizer, but Chiffon advises him against it due to Satellizer's aphephobia and his propensity to attack anyone who touches it. While they are talking, Satellizer arrives and Kazuya tries to apologize to her. Although Kazuya holds her arm, Satellizer does nothing but tell her to leave her alone. At this point, a Ganessa boasts and insults Satellizer, who starts a fight between the two despite Chiffon's warnings. When Satellizer manages to take her down, Ganessa enters Pandora Mode and starts beating and torturing Satellizer. Kazuya tries to stop the fight, but Ganessa slaps him; which causes Satellizer to react and enter Pandora Mode too, and she then defeats Ganessa. Yu-Mi and doctor Elize Schmitz arrive to stop the fight, and they punish both girls with detention in prison. After meeting director Sister Margaret and her neighbor Arthur Crypton (who turns out to be the Ganessa Limiter), Kazuya still wants to properly apologize to Satellizer, despite Arthur's warnings. Meanwhile, a Pandora named Miyabi wants to make Kazuya his youngest Limiter, but when he rejects his offer, she threatens Kazuya. This leads Satellizer to raise his weapon against Miyabi. While the two Pandoras fight, Miyabi uses Accelerating Turn to increase his speed; but she is surprised to learn that Satellizer can also use Accelerating Turn. After taking a blow to her face (which annoys her), Miyabi orders her Limiters to freeze both Kazuya and Satellizer and defeat them. While Miyabi and his Limiters sexually humiliate and harass Satellizer, Kazuya activates his freezing powers to stop them. When Yu-Mi, Elize, and Chiffon arrive to stop the fight, Satellizer brutally defeated Miyabi and his Limiters; and she is about to strike a deadly blow at Miyabi when Kazuya begs her to stop, which she does. While Yu-Mi and Elize learn the secrets of Kazuya's abilities, Chiffon warns him again to stay away from Satellizer because she is now the target of other third-year parties who do not lightly accept those who disrespect the Academy hierarchy. Instead, Satellizer attacks Ingrid before the game; but Ingrid is well prepared and takes advantage thanks to her Tempest Turn. When her Leo Limiter arrives, Ingrid gives Satellizer one more chance to get a Male Dorm Limiter next year; Kazuya volunteers, although he was alerted to the consequences of association with Satellizer. Thanks to his powerful freezing ability, Satellizer is able to take down Leo and Ingrid; but hellishly committed to punishing Satellizer Ingrid refuses to give up and goes into Pandora Mode, leaving Kazuya confused as to why Ingrid takes the discipline of hierarchy so seriously. Ganessa reveals to Kazuya that a year ago, during an outdoor training session, Ingrid's best friend Marin died when she fought a Nova alone, and she believes Marin would have if younger students did not flee due to lack of discipline in their ranks. Hearing this, Kazuya freezes Ingrid and tells her that he understands her pain only only he had when he lost his sister. He tells Ingrid that her actions are tarnishing the memories of her late friend, that Marin did not die in vain because she was actually sacrificing her life to protect younger students. As her mother was her father's lover, Satellizer was treated harshly by her younger half-brother Louis (who even sexually abused her), and she was forced to bear it for her mother's sake until her older half-sister Violet learned about it and stopped.
