Agario hacks chrome

Agario Bot Framework for others to create their own bots. Hacks? Cheats? None of this. Just bots trying to get along with people. You can try sample bot included for free in chrome store. Although the bot included has many different algorithms such as genetic algorithms and speed prediction, it's just an example and isn't optimized to get on the leaderboard. Consider it a test of what is possible. Feel free to fork this project and create your own custom bot See the latest bot in action as well as development while streaming on or How to install from GitHub Click the Download ZIP button on the right panel of Unzip anywhere you want. Go to chrome://extensions in your chrome browser Check Box Developer mode Click Load Unpacked Extension... and find your extracted file and go to src folder Now you see it in action when you go to agar.io If you change the script, remember to reload the extension. For a video installation guide, go to Purpose The purpose of this bot is to explore decision-making based on statistics instead of hard-coded rules. This is not a bot to improve normal gameplay. There are also no team-related features. Considerations should be relatively simple and need not consider more than one other organism at a time. This effectively excludes any advance strategy. The code is designed to be cleaved easily so that everything is kept on the bare necessities. If you want to (for example) create a better pathfinder, it will be the best choice to enter the code. Main components binding to original game code action generators - Generates move, split, and shoot actions. Considerations - Game strategies divided into small pieces. Distance-Delayed Best-First Search Bot Intuition - Weighted Average of Considerations. How can the bot be improved?
