Developed and published by Trickstar Games, 505 Games. It was released on November 22, 2013. Trickstar Games is developing a new game system built on the beta version of Unity Engine to provide the best gameplay in batting, bowling, and fielding. The game was supposed to be released on June 21, 2013, but the release date was moved back July 2013. With a release date yet to be stated, there were concerns that the game would not even make a revised July release. The 505 Games confirmed the game had been postponed until November 2013 due to quality issues, saying it was simply not worthy of the Ashes title despite the new release date missing the opening of the real Ashes series in Australia.
