I remember the black sky, the lightning around me, I remembered every flash as time began to blur as a startling sign that fate had finally found me, and your voice was all I heard and I get what I deserve. (Glee:) So give me a reason to prove that I am wrong to wash this memory clean Let flood cross, distance in your eyes Give me reason to fill all this space between Let it fill to reach the truth and lies through this new gap. There was nothing in sight, memories left abandoned Nowhere to hide, ashes fell like snow And the earth gave way between where we stood And your voice was all I heard and I get what I deserve. So give me a reason to prove that I am wrong to wash this memory clean let the floods intersect, the distance in your eyes through this new gap. And every loss, every lie, and every truth you deny, and every regret and every division, was a mistake to break, to hide, and your voice was everything I heard, but I get what I deserve. (Glee:) So give me an excuse to prove me wrong to wash this memory clean Let the floods intersect, the distance in your eyes Give me an excuse to fill it all, connect the space between Let it fill in to reach the truth and lies through this new gap through this new gap.
