The Khao San Road, Bangkok - first stop for the hordes of rootless young Westerners traveling in Southeast Asia. On Richard's first night there, in a low-budget guest house, a fellow traveller cuts his wrists, bequeathing to Richard a carefully drawn map to the beach. The beach, as Richard has come to learn, is the subject of a legend among young travelers in Asia: a lagoon hidden from the sea, with white sand and coral gardens, freshwater falls surrounded by jungle, plants untouched for a thousand years. There, it is rumored, a carefully selected international few have settled into a common Eden. Haunted by Mr Duck's figure - the name by which the Thai police identified the dead man - and his own obsession with Vietnam movies, Richard leaves with a young French couple to an island hidden in an archipelago forbidden to tourists. They discover the beach, and it is as beautiful and idyllic as it is known to be. But over time, it becomes clear that the culture of the beach, as Richard calls it, has disturbing, even deadly, undercurrents. Enchanting and hallucinatory, The Beach by Alex Garland - both a national bestseller and his debut - is a highly accomplished and exciting novel that fixes on a generation in their twenties who, burdened with the legacy of the previous generation and saturated by popular culture, yearn for an indestructible landscape but find it difficult to experience the world firsthand.
