If you share a lot with family, friends, or colleagues on Facebook, it can be a pain to have to manually post updates to multiple social media platforms. Luckily, you can connect your Twitter account to Facebook so that your Facebook posts appear on both sites simultaneously. While the process of connecting your Twitter account to Facebook used to be possible via the Twitter website, changes to Facebook's privacy laws have ended the ability to auto-post your tweets to your Facebook page. However, you can still connect your accounts so that your Facebook status updates appear on your Twitter account. Here's how to do it. Check out the products mentioned in this article: MacBook Pro (From $1,299.99 at Best Buy)Lenovo IdeaPad 130 (From $299.99 at Best Buy) How to link your Twitter account to Facebook 1. Ensure you're logged into your Facebook account, then visit Facebook.com/Twitter on your computer.2. Click the green "Link My Profile to Twitter" button. You can connect Twitter to Facebook via Facebook.com/Twitter. Jennifer Still/Business Insider 3. When redirected to Twitter, click the "Authorize app" button after reviewing the terms of the account connection feature. Click the "Authorize app" button when redirected to Twitter. Jennifer Still/Business Insider 4. You will then be redirected back to Facebook, where your account connection will be confirmed. Here, you can confirm which Facebook features — status updates, photos, links, videos, etc. — are cross-posted to Twitter. Uncheck the boxes for any options you don't want to be cross-posted, then click "Save Changes." Select the Facebook features that you would like to cross-post to Twitter. Jennifer Still/Business Insider 5. Your Twitter and Facebook accounts will now be linked. You can unlink them at any time by revisiting Facebook.com/Twitter and clicking "Unlink from Twitter." Related coverage from How To Do Everything: Tech: Justin Duino Sharing a video you saw on Twitter doesn't require you to retweet the original tweet's message or replies. Instead, you can embed the video in your own tweet while still providing credit and a link to the uploader. Here's how. It's possible to share someone else's Twitter video using the social network's mobile apps and the web client. The process is easiest on the iPhone, but it's still possible on Android and Twitter's desktop website. Share Twitter Videos from iPhone Start by opening the Twitter app on your iPhone and then finding a tweet that includes a video. Next, press and hold on the video. Several options should appear in a pop-up menu. Tap on the "Tweet Video" button. Next, compose your tweet, ensuring that the original tweet's URL was automatically added to the text box. When you're ready to share your message and the video, select the "Tweet" button. Your tweet has now been shared with your followers. When viewed, you should see a "From" link below the video that takes you to the original uploader's Twitter profile when tapped. Share Twitter Videos from Android The process for sharing a Twitter video on Android is similar to the iPhone's, but it requires a couple of extra steps. Begin by opening the Twitter app on your Android device and locating a tweet with a video embedded. Next, tap on the Share button found below the "Retweets" and "Likes" section. From the menu that slides up from the bottom of the screen, select the "Copy Link to Tweet" option. The tweet's URL has now been saved to your device's clipboard. Now, head back to the Twitter app's home page and tap the Compose button in the bottom-right corner. Compose a message and then paste the copied URL to the Twitter video by long-pressing on the screen and selecting the "Paste" button from the context menu that appears. Now comes the tricky part. Tap on your screen to move your cursor to the end of the URL. Next, type and add "video/1" to the tail end of the URL. You're now all set to select the "Tweet" button. You have now shared the video with all of your followers without having to retweet the original tweet. When you go and view your tweet, you will find a "From" link that sources the video's uploader. Share Twitter Videos from the Web Adding a Twitter video to your next tweet using your computer is almost identical to the Android process. Start by visiting Twitter's website and finding a tweet with a video that you want to share. From there, click on the Share button. Next, select the "Copy Link To Tweet" option to save the tweet's URL to your computer's clipboard. Head back to Twitter's home page and then compose a tweet using the box near the top of the window. Now, paste the tweet's URL. You can do this by right-clicking in the box and selecting the "Paste" option, using the Ctrl+P keyboard shortcut on Windows, or hitting Cmd+P on Mac. As with on Android, you'll now need to add "video/1" to the tail end of the pasted tweet URL. When everything looks good, click the "Tweet" button. You have now tweeted with the Twitter video embedded in your tweet. The original uploader's Twitter account can be viewed and accessed by clicking on the link found below the video. RELATED: How to Hide Twitter Replies Facebook video is taking over. Last year, for the first time, it surpassed the number of YouTube videos that were uploaded to pages on the site.According to a SocialBakers study of more than 180,000 Facebook videos on 20,000 pages in December 2014, people posted 20,000 more Facebook videos than YouTube videos . Another study by SocialBakers revealed that even when Facebook videos were not as popular as YouTube videos, they received a 40 percent higher engagement rate on the site.While it's important for brands to make use of various types of marketing channels, uploading videos directly to Facebook can greatly benefit your page. The following are some tips on how to do it so that your campaigns are as effective as possible.Use the Video Specifically to Build Your PageFacebook videos should be seen as tools to increase your number of page likes and the amount of likes on your content. They should also get conversation going on your page amongst your fans and followers.To implement this tip, you can include a call to action on your video to hit the "like" button on your page. This kind of video should be the one that's featured prominently in the "about" section. If it's hidden away in your video library, less people are likely to see it.To further develop your page, you can also encourage people to like the video, share it, or leave a comment. You might want to ask a question to your fans in the video, or include one in the description.Diamond Candles, which gives lucky customers rings worth thousands of dollars with their candle purchases, posted a video showing off their merchandise. They told fans to "like if you want one" and received 1,836 likes and nearly 25,000 views.Since Facebook videos can only be shared on the site, you won't be able to repost your call to action videos anywhere else. If you want to get more of your YouTube subscribers or Twitter followers to like your Facebook page, you're going to have to upload a video from YouTube or another site onto your other accounts.Jump Onto Trends to Connect with Your AudienceWhen a news item or fad is in style, people's newsfeeds are bursting with content about it. Just take the marriage equality Facebook photo or the KONY 2012 video, for example. You want to be there, on your audience's newsfeed, with a relevant video that they'll want to click.Look at what trends your demographic is currently into. Are they tweeting about tattoos? Are they Instagramming their Ice Bucket Challenge pictures? Are they making vines about Valentine's Day? Take a trend, put your own brand spin on it, and post a Facebook video about it. Remember to include relevant hashtags so that you have the chance to garner even more views.This past fall, caregiving company 24Hr HomeCare posted a video about their dedication to No Shave November. They included the hashtags #november and #shaveoff so they could be part of the conversation.If you do create a trend video, make sure it's not like everyone else's. It should also relate to your brand—otherwise, your fans may think you're simply opportunistic. You want to come off as genuine, not phony.Post Videos Under Two Minutes LongIf you aren't optimized for mobile, you're going to have a hard time growing your Facebook page.According to The Verge and data from Facebook itself, 30 percent of Facebook's 1.32 billion users log onto the social network exclusively on their smartphones. Aside from that, mobile video itself is going through its own revolution. According to a Business Insider study from 2014, 50 million people in the United States watch videos on their phones, and "15 percent of all online video hours globally are viewed on tablets and smartphones."When people are on Facebook, they view their notifications, answer messages, scroll through their newsfeeds, check in on friends' and families' profiles, look at the trending news, and maybe click on an ad. They don't go on Facebook to watch a long video.When posting a video on the site, keep it short. Data from a Wistia study showed that people are more likely to watch the entirety of a video if it's shorter. More than 80 percent of viewers watched one that was 30 seconds or shorter, while less than 70 percent watched one that was one to two minutes long The Coffee Bean & Tea Leaf, a coffee shop chain, posts videos that are mostly under a minute long. The company shows how their coffee is made and uploads fun, promotional videos. Even if your video is going to be under 30 seconds long, the content within it still has to be top-notch. Don't sacrifice quality just because it's short. It may be acceptable for users to post short videos they took from their iPhones, but your page has to be more professional.Make the Thumbnail ClickableYou don't want any random shot to be your thumbnail. If your followers see an interesting image on their timeline, they're going to click the video to see it.To put in a thumbnail, hover your mouse over a video you've just uploaded, click options, and then edit it. Facebook will give you a choice of 10 thumbnails to choose from.Look at Starbuck's Facebook videos for inspiration. The video with the most views has a thumbnail of Carlton doing his signature dance on The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air.On YouTube, you can upload a custom thumbnail. Unfortunately, Facebook videos do not yet allow for that, which is why it's critical that every frame of your video is clear and of the highest quality.How are you using videos on your Facebook page? Do you prefer to upload Facebook videos or YouTube videos onto your page? Which platform do you think is better? Continue the conversation on our Facebook or Google+ pages.
