(1971) Long As I Can See the Light is a song by American rock band Creedence Clearwater Revival from cosmo's factory. It was released as the B-side of the single Lookin' Out My Back Door in the 1970s. While released as a B-side, Long As I Can See the Light reached number 57 on the cash box singles chart in the US, number 20 in the UK and number one in Norway. In the UK, Long As I Can See the Light has been placed on the A-side of the single, with Lookin' Out My Back Door on the far side. The two songs were also released as a double-sided single and peaked at number two in the US. [2] On the recorded version, John Fogerty plays an electric piano and a saxophone solo. [3] Long As I Can See the Light has been included on virtually every Creedence Clearwater Revival compilation (notable examples include The Best of Creedence Clearwater Revival and Chronicle: The 20 Greatest Hits). [4] While never playing live CCR, [3] the song became a concert core for John Fogerty as a solo artist. [5] John Fogerty biographer Thomas M. Kitts describes the song as depicting a world-weary figure, perhaps Jeremiah, who takes an uncertain path. Singer believe as long as he sees the light. Christopher points out that the word light has two meanings in the song, the spiritual meaning, as in the Lord is my light from Psalm 27, and the mundane light of love. Christopher describes the music as having a hymnal, church-like feel. [6] John Fogerty expressed surprise at his arrival with a candle as a metaphor for the lighthouse keeping the singer home. He stated that the song is about the loner in me. I want to feel understood and need those at home to shine a light so I can go back. [7] 2013 remake [3] John Fogerty recorded a new version of the song with the rock band My Morning Jacket for his 2013 album He wrote a song for everyone. The remake was recorded at Blackbird Studio in Nashville on May 2, 2012. References ^ Hibbert, Tom; Dawson, Jenny (1990). Rock '70. The Ashley Brown (ed.).
