Competencies are the identified set of knowledge, skills, abilities, and behaviors needed to perform a job successfully and that they can be measured and/or observed. The five key competencies are: Effective Knowledge - the sum total of education, training, skill and experience required to perform the job to the normally expected standard. This encompasses the depth, scope, integration, and application of skills within and outside the body of knowledge or specialty applicable to an individual job category. Accountability and Self-Management - the degree to which a position requires self-direction and the degree of personal accountability required for the work accomplished. It involves responsibility for oversight and providing reports of actions, causes, and results. Teamwork and Leadership - the degree to which a position must function in a group and the degree of leadership exercised. Communication - the nature and scope of the communication activity required by a position on a regular basis. Innovation and Problem Solving - the type of problem resolution, quality improvement activity and/or process and procedure development undertaken in the position. At each level of a position, all five of these competencies are used, just in different ways. Examples of competencies for management and non-management at various levels: Example Competencies Competency Non-Management Management Effective Knowledge Level 2 example: Possesses knowledge of Microsoft programs, ISIS and possible access to Data Warehouse Demonstrates intercultural competency skills to effectively communicate with sponsors and students Level 2 example: Demonstrates broad understanding of and appropriately applies good financial management practices Utilizes technology to enhance decision making and improve organizational effectiveness Accountability & Self-Management Level 5 example: Accepts personal accountability for work and consequences Is self-directed in the work and works independently without day-to-day guidance from the supervisor Manages multiple projects and competing priorities meeting the quality standards of the unit and University Level 3 example: Works with direct reports to set project timelines and advance overall vision of the unit Reviews completed work of others for conformity to policy and effectiveness of approach Delegates more advanced tasks to others Teamwork & Leadership Level 1 example: Understands team goals and collaborates with colleagues to achieve them Level 2 example: Encourages others to work together as a team Models desired behaviors and demonstrates personal commitment to the team Communication Level 4 example: Successfully communicates with employees at all levels of the organization on a regular basis- including via face-to-face, email and other technology (i.e. Adobe Connect and Polycom) Fosters open dialogue and actively listens to others in order to build and maintain effective and respectful working relationships throughout the University Level 5 example: Articulates a strong vision for increasing student enrollment with the college Communicates complex issues clearly to a varied audience (including University leaders, employees, students and other stakeholders) in a timely, complete and accurate manner Innovation & Problem Solving Level 3 example: Recommends, enhances, and/or implements quality improvement processes and policies that have an impact on the department's operations Applies creative thinking to develop new solutions Embraces and presents ideas that are environmentally conscious.
