

Gregory Newton, MA, LMFT
Corporate Brand Ambassador

Greg has spent the past 24 years as a psychologist and life-coach in private practice in Danville, CA and adjunct professor at Diablo Valley College and John F. Kennedy University. He earned his bachelor's degree from Cornell University in 1981 in Organizational Behavior. Prior to that he worked for United Parcel Service and AT&T in Boston, MA before getting involved in the restaurant business for several years in Middlebury, VT. Upon graduation from Cornell University he founded an advertising & publishing business and served as the Arts & Entertainment editor for USA Today / Gannett News in Ithaca, NY, where he also dabbled in local theater.

At the age of 33 a life-changing near-death experience led him to become deeply immersed in the study of philosophy, consciousness & quantum physics, and cutting-edge psychology. This journey culminated in a move to the San Francisco Bay Area to attend the Graduate School for Holistic Studies at John F. Kennedy University, earning a master's degree in Archetypal /Transpersonal psychology. Greg continues to teach and conduct public workshops and trainings for therapists at various venues. He lives with his beautiful partner Dorothy Torre and 3 children in Pleasanton, CA.

Greg was born and raised in Barre, Vermont as 1 of 3 children. He has been completely self-sufficient since he was 18, venturing solo into the world and profiting from life's various challenges and experiences to forge a unique path. His journey has allowed him to develop a creative resourcefulness and an ability to imagine and identify fruitful opportunities and possibilities as they arise. He is extremely excited and grateful to be associated with Strategic Innovations and its founder Royce Newcomb in supporting a vision that has world-wide implications and that clearly provides a valuable contribution to the world. Greg has been an avid contributor and promoter of our startup and opportunity from the moment he got involved and has had a significant and incredibly positive impact on our success and ability to accomplish our objectives and mission.
