Remington 870 super mag camo 20 gauge

Visit the help section or contact us by Roy Marcot - Friday, October 30, 2020 This article, "Tops In the Blind & Field: The Remington 870," appeared originally in the September 2003 issue of American Rifleman as your member magazine. The beginning of the second half of the 20th century was a milestone product year for the Remington Arms Co. It was in 1950 that "America's Oldest Gunmaker" introduced what many believe is the finest pump shotgun ever produced: the Model 870. Produced in large numbers every year since, the Model 870 has become the most successful single firearm model in Remington's more-than-200-year history and the best selling pump-action shotgun in firearms history. Remington design engineers began working on a replacement for the rugged, but outdated, Model 31 pump-action shotgun. Utilizing common parts from the sleek, new Model 11-48 autoloader, L. Ray Crittendon, Phillip Haskell, Ellis Hailston and G. E. Pinckney developed a new pump-action that would later be called the Model 870. Like the Model 870 Wingmaster shotgun, introduced in January 1950, had a breech locked securely in a hardened barrel extension, and a new locking block and slide were devised for a smooth and effective operation. The following is a chronological history of the initial specifications and subsequent additions to this versatile and stalwart shotgun from 1950 up to 2003. The prices shown, sadly, are suggested retail for the year of introduction and no longer apply. 1950: Remington introduced 15 versions of the Model 870 shotgun, in 12, 16 and 20 gauges, including: the Model 870 ADL Deluxe Grade ($69.95); the Model 870 BDL Deluxe Special Grade ($91.45); the Model 870 Tournament Grade ($295); the Model 870F Premier Grade ($585); the Model 870TC Trap Grade ($585); the Model 870TC Trap Grade ($678.55); the Model 870TC Trap Premier Grade ($678.55); the Model 870TC Trap Premier Grade ($678.55); the Model 870TC Trap Premier Grade ($678.55); the Model 870TC Trap Grade ($678.55); the 870SD Skeet Tournament Grade ($325); the Model 870SF Skeet Premier Grade ($615); and the Model 870R Riot Grade with 20" barrel ($69.95).1955; Remington introduced the Model 870 Magnum-AP Standard Grade shotgun ($127.15), each chambered for 12-ga., 3" magnum loads, or 23/4" shells.1959: Remington introduced the 12-ga. Model 870 RSS Rifled Slug Special with slug barrel and rifle sights ($95.95), and the Model 870, such as this Model 870 Police, has been a staple of law enforcement agencies for decades. The 870 has also seen military service as the Model 870 Mk-1, adopted by the Marine Corps in 1969. 1960: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and fore-end ($162.65) and a 20-ga. magnum, chambered for 3" shells.1961: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and fore-end ($162.65) and a 20-ga. magnum, chambered for 3" shells.1961: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and fore-end ($162.65) and a 20-ga. magnum, chambered for 3" shells.1961: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and fore-end ($162.65) and a 20-ga. magnum, chambered for 3" shells.1961: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and fore-end ($162.65) and a 20-ga. magnum, chambered for 3" shells.1961: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and fore-end ($162.65) and a 20-ga. magnum, chambered for 3" shells.1961: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and fore-end ($162.65) and a 20-ga. magnum, chambered for 3" shells.1961: Remington introduced the Model 870 ADX with Sun-Grain stock and s "Brushmaster" with a 20" slug barrel, recoil pad and rifle sights ($109.70). It replaced the Model 870 RSS. Remington produced the Model 870 in a new "deluxe grade" for all field models with custom checkering and improved wood finish. 1966: In this year, Remington announced the sale of the 1,000,000th Model 870 shotgun. The year 1966 also marked Remington's 150th Anniversary, going back to 1816, when young Eliphalet fabricated his first gun barrel, giving birth to an industry. Alongside local festivities in Ilion, Remington introduced several commemorative firearms with the 150th Anniversary seal stamped on the receiver, including the Model 870 150th Anniversary Edition Shotgun. Some 2,534 would be sold over the following two years.1969: Remington introduced Model 870 field models in 28 ga. and .410 bore, which were issued with scaled-down receivers, and lightweight mahogany stocks and foreends. Remington also introduced Model 870 "Matched Pair" 20-ga. and .410-bore Skeet guns with walnut stocks and hard carrying cases, selling for $395 for the pair. Over the following three years 1,503 pairs would be sold. Remington also introduced a 20-ga. Model 870 Brushmaster Deer Gun in Standard or Deluxe versions. The firm contracted with the U.S. Marine Corps to fabricate 3,231 Model 870 Mk-1 military-style, 12-ga. Model 870 with seven-shot magazine extensions and bayonet attachments. 1970: The Model 870 Mk-1 military-style, 12-ga. Model 870 with seven-shot magazine extensions of the Model 870 were offered in Field, Magnum and Trap grades, in 12 gauge and 20 gauge. 1972: Remington introduced the Model 870 "All American" Special Trap Gun, advertising it as "the finest pump-action shotgun we've ever made," and sold the custom, engraved gun with its protective case for $550. Also, Remington introduced the 20ga. Lightweight Model 870 in both standard and magnum versions, with scaled-down receivers and managed from $139.95 for a plain barrel version to $184.95 for the 3" magnum model with ventilated-rib barrel. This humorous circa 1950 Remington advertising flier touted the virtues of the company's "Lightweight Remington Wingmaster," which tipped the scales at 63/4 lbs. in 12 gauge. During that same period, the plain-Jane Model 870 AP sold for $10 more. 1973: In October, Remington proudly announced production of the 2 millionth Model 870.1974: Remington produced 10,000 12-ga., limited-edition Model 870 DU (Ducks Unlimited) shotguns, "commemorating Ducks Unlimited's many years of service." These shotguns sold for $132.47 and featured specially decorated receivers and a selected block of serial numbers followed by a DU suffix. Due to a shortage of American walnut, in mid-year 1974, Remington began fitting some Model 870 line since 1950. Production of the 870 "All American" Trap Gun began in 1972. 1976: Remington introduced limited edition, 12-ga. "Bicentennial Commemorative" Model 870 SA Skeet Grade, Model 870 TB Trap Grade and Model 870. In this year, the "All American" Trap Guns were discontinued. The Model 870 TB Model 870 TB Trap Grade and Model 870. In this year, the "All American" Trap Guns were discontinued. The Model 870 TB Trap Grade and Model 870. Remington Model 870 Express Super Magnum Turkey Camo featured full Skyline Excel coverage, while the Model 870 Express Turkey Camo had a camo stock and fore-end with matte black metal metalwork. A 20-ga. Model 870 Express Youth Turkey Camo with a 21" vent-rib barrel, full Rem Choke also in Skyline Excel camo was also introduced. All in all, the Remington Model 870 shotgun has earned its reputation as the greatest selling pump shotgun in firearm history. This achievement was made possible by a rocksolid design and innovative Remington management, which has introduced dozens of variations over a 53-year history to satisfy millions of shotgunners. There are so many variations, it seems, that the Model 870 has become a collecting field all by itself.
