Disney+ Star Wars series The Mandalorian is a merchandising gold mine, though Disney has been slow to take advantage of it. Baby Yoda delay is the most glaring problem, but it's not the only missed opportunity. For example, fans have been clamoring for Beskar steel (aka Mandalorian steel) iPhone and Android cases. The steel is worn as armor by Pedro Pascal's The Mandalorian character, melted down from the ingots offered by The Client (Werner Herzog). Cropped steel is legendary for being one of the toughest and rarest metals in the galaxy. Of course, when there is a high demand for merchandise but no official options, unofficial opportunities swoop in to fill the void. This is the case here, with many listings popping up for both iPhones and Samsung devices on Redbubble. Prices are affordable ($21-$25) and based on the product images, they look pretty amazing. Please note that the pattern is also available on everything from shower curtains to bed thinner. Star Wars: Mandalorian follows Pedro Pascal as the titular bounty hunter who travels the outer reaches of the lawless galaxy that survives as a mercenary-for-hire. The cast also includes Gina Carano, Carl Weathers, Giancarlo Esposito, Nick Nolte, Omid Abtahi, Emily Swallow, Werner Herzog, Ming-Na Wen, and Taika Waititi as the voice of IG-11. Star Wars: Mandalorian is expected to have a season two at Disney+. In addition to The Mandalorian, other upcoming Star Wars series will include a show that stars Ewan McGregor as Obi-Wan Kenobi and a prequel to Rogue One: A Star Wars Story, which is set to feature Diego Luna as Cassian Andor and Alan Tudyk as K-2SO. The first season of Star Wars: The Mandalorian is to stream on Disney+. Disney was slow to take advantage of merchandise, especially featuring Baby Yoda. According to CNBC, The Child wasn't at the first merchandise launch for The Mandalorian because showrunners Jon Favreau and Dave Filoni wanted to avoid spoilers. But other outlets have been creating merchandise themed around Mandalorian and now Redbubble is jumping on the bandwagon.
