Effective Writing Instruction continued from page 33

Cheyl Scott (2009), whose research interests include oral and written language in school-age children and adolescents and discourse analysis techniques, supports the concept that teaching children to write more complex sentences may be an effective way to improve sentence-level comprehension in reading. If students are directly taught how to write linguistically complex sentence lovel comprehension in reading. If students are directly taught how to write linguistically complex sentence forms and are provided practice with these forms, it is reasonable to expect that when they encounter the same structures in written text they encounter the same structures in can and should begin at the sentence level.

Even if it students master writing a simple sentence, comprehending and incorporating expanded sentences into their writing can be challenging. Students often assume that roaders possess the same amount of background knowledge they themselves bring to a writing task. In a sentence expansion activities start with an unelaborated sentence. Expansion activities start with an unelaborated sentence therefore texts are subject as work, which is expanded by answering questions. Examples for Developing Writers.

The CCSS Writing standards reinforce the importance of conjunctions and transitions in developing more complex sentences and connecting ideas. (See figure 1.) Analyzing the actions of an important figure in history, the impact of a current event, or the influence of a scientific discovery, can reinforce higher-level thrising and writing skills and can be introduced in the elementary grades. For example, conjunctions (e.g., because, but, and so) can be used a sentence staties or sentence completers to support critical thinking and analytical skills if the Chrana, 2009).

I want to know how I can write a select statement to get all the records from A with the ID that is in table B. Table A: idldata 11 21 31 41 51 Table B: idlname 11A1 21A2 The ID of table B and column 'name' has no relation. I am wondering how I can write this select statement. A: This sounds like a joins problem, but there is no join since you want to relate A to B as a foreign key. You need two joins: select a.* from A join B on B.id = A.id This produces the result: id data 1 2 3 4 5 or to better understand it: select a.id, a.data, b.name id data name 1 A1 2 A2 3 A3 4 A4 5 A5 Q: How to use SelectMany LINQ in C# I have this code to get List of Student from datagridview1.DataSource as DataTable; 520fdb1ae7
