

AT HOME.

Notes from a Private Family Chef

PRIVATE FAMILY CHEF

United States • Colombia • Seasonal Residences • Available to Travel

Every home has its own rhythm.

Before I write a menu, visit the market or step into the kitchen, I like to understand how a family lives - the mornings, the children, the schedules and the preferences.

Plans change. Diets evolve. Guests arrive. I work closely with estate managers, personal assistants, nannies and household staff so the kitchen becomes part of the solution, never another complication.

My approach is simple: adapt quietly, stay calm and make it happen.

And yes - I am very comfortable sharing the kitchen with the family dog.

Notes from the Kitchen

Cooking asks us to be present.

For me, cooking is where all five senses come together. It keeps me present, curious and attentive to the details that make a meal feel personal.

Exceptional meals begin long before service.

I source thoughtfully, cook seasonally and look for trusted local farmers, fishmongers and purveyors wherever I am.

Food has always been my favorite language.

I once led a kitchen where my team and I did not share the same spoken language. Respect, curiosity and food found a way.

A NOTE I KEEP

The best ingredients deserve simple, thoughtful cooking.

My Journey

Curiosity has shaped my career as much as cooking.

For more than twenty-five years, my work has taken me through restaurants, luxury hotels, private residences and kitchens across cultures. Each place has refined the way I cook, lead and understand hospitality.

Until We Meet.

I care deeply about food, but also about the feeling around it: trust, ease, warmth and respect for the home.

As a father, I understand how personal family life is - and how important it is for the people around it to be discreet, flexible and dependable.

If you're looking for a chef who can become part of the rhythm of your home, I'd be glad to have a conversation.

Warmly, Pablo

Understand the family. Respect the home. Take care of the details.
