It's probably true that kids shouldn't keep expensive smartphones or tablets. They have a penchant for destroying these things. However, if you are brave, your mobile device can be a small window into the world that can entertain your kids for hours and sometimes it can even help educate them! Here are the best Android children's games. AndrobabyAppyz children's gameFisher-Price gameFooFoo KidsGoKidsPrice: Free / Options (usually about $1.99)Androbaby is a developer on Google Play. They did quite a few children's games. Some of them are ideal for young children. Some of the games include First Words for Babies, Baby Farm Games, Baby Flashcards, Animal Sounds, and Color Training for Babies. They have games for the elderly too, such as 2048. Most games are free with advertising. You can usually remove ads at a nominal price. Those who subscribe to Google Play Pass can get most Androbaby games for free. App's Child GamesPrice: Free/Options (usually about $1.99-$2.99) App quiz is another developer on Google Play. They also have a decent amount of good children's games. Some of the titles include Baby Puzzles, Baby Musical Instruments, Baby Balls, Toddler and Baby Games, Car Wash for Kids, and a few more. The games are simple, colorful and noisy. They are essentially just mobile versions of real life children's toy games. Every game is free to download. There is an advertisement if you stick to the free version. Paid versions remove ads. Fisher-Price Child GamesPrice: Free/$2.99 EachFisher-Price is a huge name in children's entertainment. They make a lot of toys that you've probably seen before. They also have a bunch of children's games on their mobile phone. Most games range in price from free to $2.99. This makes them easily accessible, even for those with a tighter budget. Free, usually, have no advertising either. There are games that have nursery rhymes, hide and look, counting, and sound games. Several games contain multiple games in one. They don't all work at home. However, most of them have to work very well. FooFoo KidsPrice: Free/Options (usually about $0.99)FooFoo Kids is another app developer on Google Play with a bunch of children's games and games for older kids too. It may take some searching to find the child's appropriate games. However, they have super simple things like a balloon popping and coloring app that should require virtually no effort for kids to play. All FooFoo Kids apps are free. Some are in the app purchases, but we haven't found one that cost more than $0.99. This is a worthy generic option for children's games. GoKidsPrice: Free / VariesGoKids is another developer who lots of children's games. Most of them are not educational. You can find some educational things thrown out as well. Their biggest games include Animal Farm, Baby piano zoo, learning form, and Ocean Bubbles Pop. Most games are free for With advertising. Usually you can pay to remove this ad. Some are for older children. It's just something to keep in mind if you run into one that's too hard for your child. GunjanApps StudiosPrice: Free/Options (usually $1.99-$3.99) is another developer on Google Play who makes children's games. There aren't as many as some other studios. However, they seem to be doing very well. Some of the best games include balloon pop, preschool kids, alphabet for kids, baby shapes, and Baby First Words. Some of them work very well. Others have several errors that can affect the gaming experience. We recommend checking user reviews to see what is what. Most are free to download, but the free version may have advertisements. The premium version of these children's games is usually relatively inexpensive. KidloLandPrice: Free with in-app purchases/$4.99 per month/$39.99 per yearKidloLand is actually one of the best mobile children's games available right now. It boasts over 300 mini-games, interactive videos, nursery rhymes, stories and more. Most things can be downloaded for offline use. In addition, no version of this app has advertising. However, it has many different ways of paying. You can buy things as individual purchases in the app. There is also a subscription service that gives you access to all of this. The app is fairly good with a lot of things to do. We understand if this subscription price seems like a bad idea, however. We're definitely not fans of it, either. However, this one offers more than some developers offer throughout its catalog, so it's worth looking at. Lively Mind is another developer on Google Play with a bunch of children's games. They now have about half a dozen titles. They cover topics such as singing songs, simple puzzles, rhymes, music, and some common things like animal sounds, fireworks, balloon popping, and more. The games are relatively simple and most kids should have no problem with them. Apps also work without too much trouble. Unfortunately, the free version contains ads. However, premium versions are inexpensive and they remove advertising. Magic Joy DoodlePrice: Free /0.99Magic Joy Doodle is a simple drawing app for kids and adults. You draw things in bright, neon colors on a black background. Then you can play the whole sequence back and re-watch what you have drawn. There are several different color variations, different doodle drawings, and you can save images to share on social media later if you want to brag. The color of randomization and Use to make great for younger children and the premium version is also pretty cheap. Talking Tom GamesPrice: Free Top PlayOutfit7 is one of the most popular developers on Google Play. They do Talking Volume series games. Some of them are their include my talking Tom, my talking Angela, and many others. Each game is a little different from what it was before. Their latest name, My Talking Hank, is actually a sim where you take care of a puppy named Hank. It's all very charming. It may be too much for some kids. However, they are free to download. Make sure your password protects your Google Play account. They have in-app purchases. If we missed any of the best children's games for Android, tell us about them in the comments! However, some people still enjoy the sport while others hate it completely. Hunting games have changed very little from their roots. You sit tight, wait to see the game and then shoot the game. There are a bunch of hunting games for Android, but few stand out. Here are the best of them! Hunting SimulatorHunt CookPokemon GoWild HuntWild Hunter 3DPrice: Free /Up to $9.99Big Hunter is an arcade hunting game. You play as a hunter with a variety of weapons and tactics. Massive animals chase you back and you have to successfully stop them. It's not a deep or realistic hunting game in any respect, so don't expect that with that. At best, it's killer time for short game sessions. However, there is a storyline along with the leaders and some additional stuff. Deer Hunter 2018Price: Free play/ $1.99-$4.99 per monthDeer Hunter 2018 is one of several hunting games by Glu. This one tries a little harder to be accurate and deep. You can hunt the game from all over the world with a variety of weapons and equipment. There are also predators that try to get you first, so there's a bit of tension out there. It's pretty nice to play. There are some free game elements though, and the game is pushing hard towards them along with its in-game subscription. It's a little annoying, but the mechanics are pretty sturdy. In addition, Glu owns a Deer Hunter license, apparently, so the company has several Deer Hunter games. Deer Hunter ClassicPrice: Free to play The Deer Hunter Classic is very similar to Deer Hunter 2018, but a little more classic obviously. You go out to hunt and there are over 100 species of animals to find and hunt. There are also different types of weapons and weapons upgrades to maximize your chances of success. The graphics are pretty good and the mechanics are simple enough to find out. This is a solid overall experience and a decent time killer for fans of hunting games. There are some mistakes in the game though, so prepare yourself for that. Dino HunterPrice: Free to playDino Hunter is that you don't have to hunt real animals. This is the one you have hunting a prehistoric game. Otherwise, it's actually a pretty typical free-to-play hunting game. You get different types of gear Upgrade to improve your chances and you scour the world looking for a new game. There are even some futuristic weapons for the sake of variety. It's free to play the game and it definitely shows in a few hours, but it has solid mechanics for those who don't mind grinding a bit. Don't Starve: Pocket EditionPrice: $4.99 Don't Starve is a survival game with lots of fun game mechanics. You end up stranded in some strange place and have to survive at all costs. There are many things here, including the crafting and agricultural system. However, you can absolutely hunt the animals in this game. You can do this by setting traps or attacks directly. Since the room does not starve to death, hunting for food is actually the main mechanic. There are some other survival games that dabble with this, but we like the non-starved approach. There is a second game in the series, Don't Starve: Shipwreck, which is also pretty good. Hunting SimulatorPrice: Free /Up $9.99Hunting Simulator is another worthy indie hunting game. The game includes a total of nine cards, eight weapons, 12 total types to hunt down, and some extra gear for hunters such as the bait subscriber. We especially liked the ballistic calculator and the change of wind. This adds a bit of depth you don't usually see in the indie hunting market. The graphics may be better and there are some bugs, but it's definitely not a bad game in this space. Hunting CookPrice: Free to playHunt Cook is technically a cooking game, but it has hunting elements. The game focuses on the whole experience of getting food from the wild and on your plate. So while there are many cooking mechanics, there are also some hunting mechanics as well. Players basically go out into the wild, find and hunt things and then bring it back to serve the people in their restaurant. The game may be kind of slow on occasion because of its energy system, but it is otherwise a decent time killer. Pokemon Go and similar gamesPrice: Free to play This one is a bit of a mental stretch, we recognize. However, it is a hunting game at its core. Pokemon Go has players go out into the real world to take gyms, fight each other, and of course hunt down Pokemon and catch them. We love that this game gets you out of your chair and into the real world. However, we understand if you are disappointed with the lack of such things as weapons. It's a family game, and there are others like him. It won't scratch that hunting sim itch or maybe it will, since you have to go out into nature. Wild HuntPrice: Free to playWild Hunt is one of the most popular hunting games. You can hunt a variety of wild games in this one. The game also has a different in different countries, added difficulty with things like rain and wind, and even some social gaming elements. The game boasts real places and actual animals, so there is no fiction in this. You Are You Arms and upgrade them as you do in free-play titles. PvP is a bit weird and free play stuff always gets on your nerves after a while. Aside from that, it is easily one of the few that reaches the top in this genre. Wild Hunter 3DPrice: Free to playWild Hunter 3D is a mission style hunting game with an amazing amount of content. It boasts more than 200 mission history, a bunch of weapons to collect and upgrade, and decent mechanics and graphics. The controls take a moment to get used to because there are many buttons. However, it's about just the basic gripe we have aside from it being free to play the game. All in all, it's a decent hunting simulator as long as you don't mind shopping in the app. If we missed any big hunting games, tell us about it in the comments!
